41,000 More Firms Under Price Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — The wage and price controls program has been extended to 41,000 more companies employing 500,000 workers, effective from Dec. 16.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald announced Monday the government has accepted an anti-inflation board recommendation that controls should apply to certain key industries in which major companies bargain with labor as a group. The industries are construction, trucking, grain handling, longshoring and most of the shipping industry.

The board maintained these industries are strategically important for containing inflation and must be directly regulated.

Many West Coast labor leaders could not be reached for comment.

Roy Gautier, secretary of the B.C.-Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council, said, however, the move is "just another extension" of the existing imbalanced effort to deal with prices and profits.

The council co-ordinates bargaining among construction unions and Gautier said: "on the contractors' side, we can't see any method of controlling their profits."

The board also was authorized Monday to initiate a similar study to determine whether property and casualty insurance companies — so-called general insurers as opposed to life insurance companies — should be brought under the controls program.

The effect of the federal decision to bring industries that engage in association bargaining under direct controls is to extend the restraints program to smaller companies.

Originally, the controls were to apply directly only to companies with 500 or more employees, or to construction companies that employed 20 or more.

But many smaller companies, particularly in construction, join together as an association to engage in collective bargaining. Most of the 41,000 additional companies being brought under the controls by the new measure are construction companies with less than 20 employees.

As a result of extending controls over the five industries, a greater proportion of each of the five industries will be regulated, the board says.

In construction, between 75 and 80 per cent of the industry, measured in terms of union man-hours, will be covered, compared with less than 40 per cent previously.

In trucking, between 60 and 70 per cent of the industry in terms of dollar revenues will be brought under controls, compared with 20 per cent before.

Up to 90 per cent of grain handling companies' labor force will be controlled, compared with 65 per cent previously.

For shipping industries, controls will be extended to 80 per cent of companies, measured in terms of tonnage weight and manpower, compared with 40 per cent before.

And for longshoring industries, 90 per cent of the labor force will be controlled, up from less than 20 per cent.

GAMES ACCIDENT

4 Workers Die in Fall

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Four construction workers died Monday night when a concrete slab which was being installed at the Olympic stadium plummeted 185 feet to the ground.

The victims were inside the hollow slab working to attach two 70-ton cement sections in place when the accident occurred.

The sections had been temporarily in place for several days.

Jean-Claude Lebrun, spokesman for the Quebec Federation of Labor's building trades council, told a reporter today: "We are waiting for reports to come in.

"If it is confirmed there was negligence involved, we will demand an inquiry by the department of manpower, and we may hold an inquiry ourselves as well."

Henry Tamaki, spokesman for Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd., which employed the workers, said a statement is being prepared.

Guy Toupin, Montreal Urban Community police deputy director who is in charge of Olympic security, said investigators will need a few days to determine exactly what happened.

"At first sight, it appears to be accidental," he said. "An investigation is under way and our men have already been on the site."

Police identified the dead as Xavier Harvey, 43, of Chicoutimi, Que., Paul-Emile Leveu, 41, of Montreal, Benoit Breton, 27, of Levis, Que., and Bertrand Fortin, 23, of Montreal.

Two other workers were treated in hospital for nervous shock and later released.

Fellow workers said there was a noise like thunder when the four fell to their deaths in the beam which crushed a truck when it landed at the base of the tower.

"We heard a great noise and the top of the beam started to fall," said Giovani Ricardo, a compressor operator who was working nearby.

"One guy started to jump out on the way down, but he landed on top of the sections when they struck the ground. The three others were trapped inside. It was horrible."

Freddie Allu, a truck driver, said: "It just fell. It sounded like it was thunder."

Two hours after the accident, Mayor Jean Drapeau visited the site, where the Quebec government took over construction in November from the City of Montreal.

"Every large construction project has a certain number of accidents per million dollars of construction," Drapeau said.

"The record shows that we are below the average. But we can never be too low."

The stadium will be used for the opening and closing ceremonies of the Summer Games.

Site engineer Lionel Reeves said he did not expect the accident to seriously affect the tight construction schedule on the project.

Construction worker Jean-Marie Lesage was killed and four others injured last August when a 85-ton concrete support beam broke loose and fell 70 feet to the stadium floor.

INSPECTORS at the Olympic site in Montreal check one of the huge concrete beams which fell 185 feet Monday night, carrying four workers to their deaths. The beam also crushed a truck.

$3.2M DEMAND

FRANKFURT (AP) — A gunman seeking freedom for an accused bank robber seized two hostages in a courthouse here today and demanded $3.2 million and passage on a West German jetliner to Cuba, police reported.

The gunman also demanded a helicopter or automobile with bullet-proof windows to ferry him and the robber suspect to Frankfurt airport.

DOW TOPS 1,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market briefly scaled the 1,000 mark of the Dow Jones industrial average Tuesday but almost as quickly retreated below that critical psychological landmark.

The noon Dow average was ahead 7.48 at 996.22, but about 45 minutes after trading began the average was up about 11 points at around 1,001—the first time in more than three years the market had achieved that level. New York Stock Exchange listed gainers held a 3-1 lead over losers.

Brokers said the market apparently was riding the momentum of Monday's 15.82-point rally, helping the Dow hit the 1,000 mark that eluded the market in several attempts two weeks ago. But they said profit-taking cut into Tuesday's earlier gains.

New Lebanon Fort Seized By Rebel Moslem Troops

BEIRUT (UPI) — Moslem troops rebelled in southeast Lebanon today, seizing a barracks and the second medieval fortress in two days. Premier Rashid Karami said the unrest in army ranks had caused a grave situation and the government had foiled attempts to partition the country.

Karami confirmed the takeover of barracks and two ancient castle strongholds in Lebanon by army rebels. He said there had been attempts to create "two peoples, two Lebanons and two armies."

"But we have foiled them," Karami said. He was apparently returning to earlier events in Lebanon during the civil war.

Speaking in parliament, Karami said the consequences of the latest rebel action "could be grave."

He appealed for the army to retain its present status and avoid being tampered with "since the army represents national unity."

Karami's confirmation of a new rebel uprising posed a new threat to his government and Syrian peace negotiators arrived to help stem the crisis within the ranks of the army.

The rebellion today at Rashaya, a few miles from the Syrian border, followed a similar revolt Monday by artillerymen at Arnoun, about 15 miles to the southwest near the Israeli frontier.

The Arnoun rebels announced they were joining the "Lebanese Arab army," a group of Moslem soldiers who deserted from the Lebanese army during the 10-month civil war over allegations of pro-Christian bias.

Former defence minister Joseph Skaf told reporters that today's rebellion had been taken over by the Lebanese Arab army.

The deserters' army, led by Lt. Ahmed Khatib, numbers between 300 and 500 troops and previously has been active in northern and eastern Lebanon. The rebels have refused amnesty offers to lay down their arms.

GROG

The navy's rum tot days weren't exactly what nostalgic types would have you believe and there are many that are glad they're gone.

While hands below their ranks had to take their rum diluted with water in the early days and soft drinks in latter years, petty officers and chief petty officers could draw theirs straight.

At least one CPO is known to have died of overdrinking. See story on page 15.

Watson Quits PWA

EDMONTON (CP) — Don Watson, president of provincially-owned Pacific Western Airlines, resigned Monday in the latest development following the government's decision to move PWA's head office here from Vancouver.

Rod MacDaniel, chairman of the PWA board, announced the resignation of Watson, 54, of Vancouver, after a board meeting here.

The proposed move, which Watson has said could destroy the airline because of the additional cost of millions of dollars, has also met opposition from British Columbia cabinet ministers, the Canadian Airline Pilots' Association and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Watson had been with PWA for 18 pears, the last five as president and chief executive officer.

Last December he declined an offer to become president or chairman of the board of Air Canada.

He is succeeded by Rhys Eaton, 40, of Edmonton, executive vice-president of finance and planning.

MacDaniel said Watson will remain a special advisor to the board but declined comment on why Watson resigned or if the resignation had been forced.

Alberta Transport Minister Hugh Horner told the legislature earlier Monday the airline's board of directors had been asked to prepare a timetable for the transfer.

An injunction is being sought against the transfer by Chris Harder of Edmontoh, who says he owns one PWA share. Mr. Justice James Cavanaugh will hold a hearing on the application Wednesday.

Pound Plummet Stops

LONDON (AP) — The British pound, which plummeted to record lows Monday before levelling off and closing at $1.9440 in U.S. currency, was slightly higher on foreign exchange markets today.

The ailing currency was quoted at $1.9475 U.S. and $1.191 Canadian in early trading, and one dealer said sentiment toward the pound had improved.

He said he was certain the Bank of England, Britain's central bank, had not intervened in the market to support sterling in early dealings by buying up pounds.

Dealers disagreed over whether the bank was instrumental in halting Monday's slide of the pound, which at one point was at $1.9275.

The pound dropped below the $2 mark for the first time in history Friday.

BREAD HIKE APPROVED

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board announced today that it has reviewed and approved a recent increase of one cent a loaf in the wholesale price of bread in Western Canada by McGavin-Toastmaster of Vancouver and Toronto-based Weston Bakeries Ltd.

Beryl Plumptre, board vice-chairman, said in a prepared statement the increase resulted from higher costs considered legitimate under the selective pay and price controls program.

The one-cent increase at the wholesale level will mean a "slightly greater increase" at the retail level, she said.

The increase was announced by the two bakeries about two weeks ago and applies only to bread in the western provinces.

Mrs. Plumptre said the retail price increase had not immediately gone up in all western cities.

She said the board's food price monitoring program found last week that Dominion Stores in Regina were holding the price while Safeway, Co-op and Loblaws had increased the price in that city.

Supervalu and IGA stores in Vancouver also had increased the price.

$150,000 COCAINE ON PAIR

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver city police officers, investigating two suspicious persons at a restaurant Monday, found them in possession of three pounds of cocaine, a vial of liquid hash and two handguns.

Police said the cocaine had a street value between $150,000 to $200,000.

The officers went to a West Broadway hotel restaurant about 1:30 p.m. to check a man and a woman who were "acting drunk and slumping over their table."

They found three pounds of cocaine in a plastic shopping bag and the hashish and guns in their clothing.

Charged with possession for the purpose of trafficking and possession of restricted weapons are Gerald Kenny, 23, and Katherine Fong, 22, both of no fixed address.

COSTLY GUEST

OTTAWA (CP) — Prince Charles' visit to the Arctic last year cost taxpayers $265,000, documents tabled at a Commons committee showed Monday.

The Prince of Wales spent three days in Ottawa last April before visiting communities across the North.

Also included in supplementary spending estimates for 1975-76 is $90,000 for preparations for the Queen's July visit to open the Olympic Games in Montreal.

$858,000 Heist

BERLIN, West Germany (CP) — Armed robbers held up two security guards and escaped with 2.2 million marks — or $858,000 — in cash Monday. The sum was a postwar record for West Berlin.

School Strike?

NANAIMO (CP) — About 200 members of Local 606 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees were to vote today on possible strike action against the Nanaimo school district. No details of the negotiations have been released by either side.

Royal Ups Rate

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank Monday joined the Bank of Montreal in increasing its prime rate to 10¼ per cent from 9¾. The Royal also announced an increase in interest on non-chequing bonus savings accounts to 7¾ per cent from 7½.

Union Appeals

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian Paperworkers' Union filed a petition with the federal cabinet today in an effort to reverse the Anti-Inflation Board's decision last month to disallow a contract settlement with Irving Pulp and Paper Co.

Indians Grab Military Land at Williams Lake

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — The Toosey Indian band has claimed 100,000 acres of Department of National Defence land near here and will keep all military personnel off the land, a band spokesman said Monday.

Chief Ray Hance said the declaration is part of a long-standing claim and was prompted by the possibility that an Indian cultural education centre near the reserve will be closed because of a lack of government funding.

Hance said an agreement for $96,000 annual federal funding in quarterly payments to the Fish Lake centre still is in effect, but no payments have been made since April, 1975.

He said this non-payment was initially in response to a general policy by Indians in British Columbia to refuse government funding last year, but that when Fish Lake directors later decided to seek the money it was not forthcoming.

"We are just hanging on," said Hance. "There is a danger the centre will be lost if we don't get help soon."

He said the $8 million worth of buildings, on a small section of the claimed land, were formerly used by the Department of Indian Affairs but the department's operations closed three years ago because of high expenses and high student turnover.

Fish Lake directors have demonstrated they can run the centre for much less money than the government, he said, and have a turnover rate of five per cent compared with 50 per cent for the federal government's program.

He said he has received no response to telegrams sent to Defence Minister James Richardson and Indian Affairs minister Judd Buchanan giving Feb. 20 as a deadline for reply to the claim.

The band has declared the area off limits to the military now but will lift the restriction once land negotiations begin, the chief said.

He added there has been no confrontation with the military "because we haven't seen any military people there."

The 100,000-acre parcel was given by the province to the federal government in 1912 in exchange for the University of B.C. endowment lands in Vancouver.

The Toosey Indian band's claim is similar to that of a number of Chilliwack bands which jointly operate the Coqualeetza cultural education centre at Chilliwack.

They Want to Stay in the Dark

Cadboro Bay residents want to remain in the dark — when it comes to street lighting.

More than 60 people attended the annual meeting of the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association on Monday night and reaffirmed they do not want street lighting in the Ten-Mile Point and Queenswood areas.

"They want to live in the country, virtually," a spokesman said today, "They want no light and they're not particularly keen on wide roads and sewers."

The residents, however, are concerned about some septic tanks in the Ten Mile Point area that are malfunctioning, causing pollution in Cadboro Bay.

The meeting voted to write Greater Victoria medical health officer Dr. Allan Arneil, asking that his department take action.

Peter Corley-Smith was reelected for a second term as president. Vice-president is Dr. Gerhardt Friedmann. The new directors ar Dr. Walter Barss, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cox, Mrs. Anna Foster, Edmund Higgin, Chris Pike, Brian Turner and Norman Worsley.

On the suggestion of treasurer Lionel Adey, the members voted to double dues from $1 to $2 to cover cost of meetings and other rising expenses.

By a narrow margin, it was approved to allow persons not living in the area but operating businesses there to join the association.

$500,000 FOR ADS

OTTAWA (CP) — The solicitor-general's department plans to spend $500,000 this year to inform the public of its peace and security program, documents tabled at a Commons committee showed Monday.

The money, part of the government's supplementary spending estimates for 1975-76, is for establishment of a special communications unit in the department to explain the program.

the Arctic,with the death of 32. timates is $420,000 for the cost of the federal inquiry into the operations of Air Canada and $100,000 for the judicial inquiry into the 1974 crash of a Panarctic Oils Ltd. aircraft in the Arctic with the death of 32.

McGeer Slapped For 'Confusion'

School boards in B.C. have been thrown into total confusion over the education minister's criticism of school budgets, the chairman of the Saanich Peninsula school board said today.

Gerry Kristianson said trustees voted Monday night to send two letters to Education Minister Pat McGeer: one asking for early action to ensure that teachers' salaries fall within the federal wage guidelines; the other condemning McGeer for his criticism in a news release of school boards for "completely unrealistic" budgets.

Kristianson said the second letter would support a letter already sent to McGeer by the B.C. School Trustees' Association, which said McGeer's news release was full off "inaccurate, distorted inferences."

The Saanich school budget is to rise by 17.8 per cent this year, Kristianson said, and the only way to cut the budget is to reduce the teaching staff.

The Public Schools Act stipulates that a growing school district, like Saanich, cannot lay off teachers and Kristianson says relying on attrition is chancy, at best.

He said the board is legally bound to pay teachers their arbitrated salary increases, which were above the federal guidelines, until there is some sort of legislation which makes it possible for the salaries to be rolled back.

He said teachers were sent a letter with their paycheques which said if that legislation is passed, the board may have to recover part of the teachers' increases from them.

The education department sent out a budget review team, which was to check district budgets.

"We asked them (the review team) if our budget was high and they said it's not high compared to other budget increases in the province," Kristianson said.

He said boards in B.C. have to wait now for two things: first the upcoming session for legislation which would allow teachers' salaries to be put under the guidelines; and secondly, for April 20, the date the education department lets school districts know what share of education costs they must pay.

Public Sector Trouble Seen

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Widespread disruptions in the public service will result if Premier Bennett is successful in attempts to bring public employees under wage and price controls, Jim Kelly and Gordon MacIsaac, two national representatives of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said Monday.

Bennett has announced that federal controls apply to public servants.

"There is no getting around it, the controls apply to wages only," said Kelly. Energy, housing and food prices make up 75 per cent of the consumer price index, yet these items are exempt from price controls, he added.

Under the controls, wage increases are limited to 12 per cent.

CUPE contracts in the Kamloops area have been averaging 20 per cent during the last year and both Kelly and MacIsaac said it is their intention to continue negotiating contracts at that rate.

Each is responsible for negotiating for 17 locals in the Kamloops area.

MacIsaac said the action of the province in attempting to bring controls to bear on CUPE is a direct response to requests from smaller elected bodies which are trying to escape legally negotiated contracts.

N-Dump Probed

CARSON CITY (UPI) — A radioactive waste disposal site in southern Nevada has been closed by state officials investigating reports that "hot" material has been removed by employees.

Roger Trounday, director of the Department of Human Resources, said Monday his inquiry would include a search of the area surrounding the plant to determine whether any radioactive material actually has been taken.

Squeaker For Whitlam

Manchester Guardian

SYDNEY — Former Prime Minister Gough Whitlam has narrowly retained the leadership of the Australian Labor party after a three-day meeting of the party's federal executive called to investigate the $50,000 Iraqui money scandal.

Whitlam was heavily censured by the 18-member executive for his involvement in the affair but was given a vote of confidence, albeit weak, in the final deliberations of the meeting.

Party president Robert Hawke later told a news briefing that Whitlam and two other party members had committed "a grave error of judgment."

Party secretary David Combe, who had taken part in the original negotiations allegedly aimed at securing the money to bolster Labor's campaign fund for last December's election, was also strongly rebuked.

Bill Hartley, a pro-Palestinian member of the party's federal executive who had originally come up with he idea of attempting to find money in th Middle East, was strongly criticized, and he seems certain to face serious disciplinary action within the party.

The decision merely to censure Whitlam reportedly came after exhaustive debate within the executive. Moves to remove him from the leadership were defeated after long and sometimes heated debate.

The executive met more than 20 hours over the weekend, listening to detailed explanations of how Whitlam and Combe became involved with two Iraqi emissaries who came to Australia in December.

Juveniles Blamed For Crime

EDMONTON (CP) — Juveniles are directly responsible for increasing crime rates in Alberta, Solicitor-General Roy Farran told the Legislature Monday.

About 40 percent of those in provincial jails are under 21 and 60 per cent under 25, Farran said during throne speech debate.

"The majority of criminals are not born but made — or spoiled — by experienc which starts at an early age," he said.

The solicitor-general, noting Alberta is second only to British Columbia in its crime rate, said part of the trend was due to the large youth population.

"The post-war babies are still passing through our society like a big wave of population.".

He blamed part of the problem on a "permissive" educational system.

Ferries May Go to Cut Deficit

DAVIS

Canadian Press

The possibility of selling two British Columbia ferries is among alternatives being considered by the provincial government to reduce the operating deficit, Transport Minister Jack Davis said Monday.

Davis said he has made various recommendations to cabinet concerning the B.C. Ferries fleet but no final decisions have been made.

The Swedish-built ferry Queen of Surrey, which runs between Nanaimo and Horseshoe Bay, and the Langdale Queen, sailing between Horseshoe Bay and Langdale, may be offered for sale, he said.

The Queen of Surrey, purchased by the former New Democratic Party administration in 1974, is basically an overnight sailer designed for trips longer than those made by the B.C. Ferries vessels, Davis said.

He said if the vessel is offered for sale the government hopes it would be purchased by an organization which would use the ship on the type of run for which it was designed.

The Langdale Queen is simply outdated, he said.

The two ships will become surplus when three new larger vessels are operating by the end of the summer, the minister said.

The three new ferries are designed to carry two deckloads of cars and the government is preparing temporary docking facilities which would allow both decks to be loaded at the same time, Davis said.

Shortly after the new Social Credit government took office last December, it was learned the three ferries were nearing completion but no new docks were under construction.

The minister said this year's operating deficit for the fleet is about $50 million and next year's loss is expected to be $90 million.

Part of the increased loss is due to a shorter work week by the employees. Davis said more people and cars will travel on the new ferries so the government will be able to accommodate more travellers with the same amount of staff.

It would be preferable to carry more people per sailing rather than reduce the number of sailings, the minister added.

More details on money problems plaguing the ferries will be released in the throne speech at the opening of the legislative session on March 17, he said.

Meanwhile, he said the government has received four bids for the purchase of the steamship Prince George and details of those bids are expected to be released Thursday.

Whale Capture Causes Furore

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The first killer whales captured under terms of a 1972 U.S. federal law may not be headed for tanks at a Seattle aquarium.

Five killer whales, with an estimated commercial value of $100,000 or more each, were coralled over the weekend in the confined water of south Puget Sound. The hunt, conducted under Marine Mammal Protection Act permit, has caused a public furor.

Governor Dan Evans will call for a review of the case and likely will be "registering a strong protest," an aide said. The incident came, ironically, as Democratic Senator Warren Magnuson of Washington was urging designation of the Sound as a killer whale sanctuary.

The whales were still imprisoned Monday night in a net attached to a trawler in Olympia's main harbor. The state's top wildlife official, Lloyd Walker, said he doubted any would qualify for capture because they were too small.

"I would think they would have to release all of them," he said. Other department officials were not so sure, however.

Agency spokesman Tom Knight said two or three of the whales may be of legal size. He added: "There is no way to accurately measure the size of the whales until you put them up in a sling and put a tape measure to them."

The U.S. commerce department said only three permits have been issued under the Marine Mammal Protection Act, which took effect in 1973. No whales had been captured before the latest hunt.

The permit system, described by the agency as protection for whales, provides that the animals can be taken only for public display or research.

Don Goldsberry, director of the Seattle Marine Aquarium and holder of the permit, wants to display killer whales — as he did in the case of Namu, a whale which became a movie star in the early 1970s.

"We have done more for killer whales and their welfare than all the environmentalists put together," he said. "I'm proud of what I've done."

He conceded he does not know what he will do with the killer whales.

Hunt spokesman Bob Nein said it was possible that all of the spouting sea mammals would be released — or that they would be used by the University of Washington as part of a program for tracking the migration of whales.

In view of several hundred sailors and local residents, the hunting party used a seaplane, trawler, power cruiser, a speed boat and some type of explosive to corral the herd.

An aide to the governor, Ralph Munro, called the hunt "the most disgusting, rotten thing I have seen."

Evans was skiing in Utah, but Munro said the state will call for a review of the situation, with emphasis on scientific information. One marine biologist had warned that the Puget Sound whale population was down to 65 before the hunt.

Tame Police Board

Like so many other regulatory bodies supposed to protect the public interest, the Victoria police board shows itself to be a tame creature of the agency it should control. What a sad spectacle it is to see this appointed board endorsing a policy of using police photographers to film demonstrations.

Board members assuaged their conscience by agreeing to the photographing as long as films were destroyed if no charges arose. It would appear this milquetoast board has been conned by Victoria police chief Jack Gregory, that genius who advocated putting convicted murderers to sleep with a massive drug overdose.

Let us examine the chief's arguments for filming. Gregory says it is normal police procedure to station police photographers in crowds where some sort of disturbance is expected. The chief added that police intelligence indicated there was going to be a disturbance and that the demonstration had been infiltrated by "troublemakers." In Canada, even in an outpost like Victoria, people are innocent until they are proven guilty. The police have every right to prepare for trouble, even to the point of having photographers on hand, but why do these minions take pictures when no trouble has occurred? Photographing innocent people prior to a disturbance that only exists in police minds is an assumption of guilt, at least potential guilt.

Even more indicative of the chief's thinking was his statement that the presence of a police photographer could act as a deterrent to trouble. Are we to sacrifice the right to privacy in Canada in favor of deterrents?

It might also be said of the police photographer that he acted not so much as a deterrent but as an intimidator of ordinary people exercising their civil rights. The police have no business intimidating the citizenry. Then the chief assures us films had not been developed because no disturbance occurred. Gee, that's ever so reassuring. Because the films were not developed does not mean they never will be. Even assurances that films will eventually be destroyed are not enough. Other police agencies have given similar assurances only to renege at a later date.

While we have come to expect this kind of contorted logic from the police chief, we expect more from a board chaired by Mayor Mike Young, who is a lawyer along with two other board members. No wonder Canadian civil rights are such a transparent joke. A parochial police chief and a smug little board are so obsessed with deterring, they ignore freedom. Canadians will eventually pay a stiff price for allowing these mediocrities to dominate official thinking.

". . . why? . . . the provincial government is subsidizing student jobs this summer . . ."

Looking for Olympic Loopholes

In his role of playing the apologetic sycophant for Prime Minister Trudeau last weekend Health Minister Marc Lalonde insisted Ottawa had not eliminated the possibility of federal financial help for the Olympic Games which didn't require dipping into taxpayers' pockets. The prime minister, for his part, ridiculed demands for federal money to pay off an estimated $600 million deficit. Who is saying what and to whom? Treasury Board's Chretien also got into the act during an Ottawa meeting, saying the federal government is examining alternate revenue sources with Quebec that would not involve the federal treasury.

Something is obviously afoot, but short of simply printing up an extra $600 million in greenbacks — a solution that would not be too surprising considering how this bunch prints money — it is hard to see what else could be done. Perhaps the government is thinking of a loan, to be paid off from lottery revenue. This is a comfortable old trick for financing railroads. Give them a big loan, maintain interest payments for 20 years, and then forgive the whole thing when the public isn't looking. If Ottawa tries such a trick the bellowing will be heard from sea to sea.

It wasn't too long ago that Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau said his Olympics would not cost the Canadian taxpayer one red cent. A little more than one year later he was back looking for a loan. Meanwhile, the prime minister has been emphatic, no more federal money would go to bail out Drapeau's pipe dream. Besides stamp and coin sales, Ottawa will pay $25.5 million to supply security at the games. Quebec's provincial government has also agreed to provide loans. But costs have escalated 300 per cent to a figure approaching $1 billion. The deficit looms larger each day.

In an unfortunate sense, these games, which are supposed to foster goodwill, have become a divisive symbol of Canadian unity. To the outside world it must seem incredible that a nation such as Canada is bickering internally about who should pay costs. From the point of view of an American or European they are Canadian Olympics. In Canada they are often referred to as Montreal's or Quebec's games. Looking at the issue through Quebecois eyes, they see the Queen of Canada, who is also the residing British monarch, opening the games while English Canadians turn up Anglo Saxon noses at suggestions they help pay for these Canadian games. Quebec's arguments are not without logic too.

If these games, foisted on all of us by a greedy mayor, should become the pivot point of an English-French contretemps we may have to make some hard choices. The issue shows all the signs of being distorted by partisans on both sides. When it comes to national unity or paying off a bad debt the answer is naturally to pay, and bury one's pride rather than our nation. But it needn't come to this. The little mayor has been thrown lifejackets by his country and his province. He should quit bleating and at least try to swim for shore. If the whole boat shows signs of sinking, we will all take a bath. Meanwhile, Ottawa walks the plank in both directions.

ROB BULL

Fed Up with 'That Man'

QUEBEC — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau brought a few truths home to Quebec City on the weekend for Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa to chew on.

If Quebec does not agree to patriate the Canadian constitution with the rest of the country, the federal parliament which represents all Canadians may do so on its own.

"We can argue about the separation of powers and any other major changes afterwards," he told an audience of 1,400 delegates to the federal Liberal party's Quebec wing convention.

Until now Bourassa has refused to consider Quebec agreement to patriation of the constitution without special guarantees for the preservation of Quebec or French-Canadian culture.

Trudeau once more turned down Bourassa's request for federal aid in financing a possible Olympics deficit of $600 million.

Rough Speech

He said that the federal government had worked hard to bring the Olympic games about, including the expenditure of $150 million on games-related activities but it could not give in to Quebec's requests for Olympic aid from federal tax dollars.

"The money squabbles will probably continue," he said, "but for the moment, what is important is that the games take place and are a success."

Trudeau also had harsh words for one of Premier Bourassa's proudest achievements, Quebec's official language law. The prime minister said he approved and sympathized with the principle of the bill which is to protect and promote the use of French in Quebec.

But he described the law as "politically stupid" and unsound in many of its applications.

It was a rough speech, in down-home Quebec language, colorful, witty and hard-hitting. Trudeau leaned over the lectern and loosened his tie during the hour-and-a-half of relaxed delivery. The speech was given after three hours of what the official news releases refer to as "wide-ranging" discussions with the premier earlier in the day.

It was delivered in Quebec's modern municipal convention centre directly across St. Cyrille Boulevard from the Quebec national assembly.

On his way out of the meeting, Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde nodded his head in the general direction of the national direction of the national assembly and asked a reporter, "Do you think they heard it over there?"

One of the first from the other side of the street to react was Quebec Finance Minister Raymond Garneau who called Trudeau's remarks "arrogant, unnecessary and indicative of a certain rigidity of thought."

ROBERT BOURASSA
. . . ridiculed by Trudeau

Treasury Board President Jean Chretien kept up the pressure on the provincial government Saturday with the suggestion that Quebec tends to wrap up federal funds in the provincial flag and not give credit where credit is due to Ottawa.

Rod Blaker, MP for Lachine—Lakeshore, told newsmen that Premier Bourassa's policies were having an unfortunate effect on federal Liberal political strength.

"We got on our little red bicycle and rode away from Robert Bourassa," Blaker said in an interview.

"I think that's a good thing. He's hurting us and I'm fed up with that man, fed up to the teeth."

Blaker echoes the opinions of many other English-speaking members of the federal Liberal party in Quebec, including a substantial proportion who feel their presence is no longer appreciated in the provincial Liberal party.

But there was a general feeling among many observers that the prime minister's speech was aimed at the rest of Canada as well as the provincial Liberal party.

Trudeau, for example, got a shot off at "those fanatics" in Vancouver who oppose a French-language television station in that city "because they fear some sort of French pollution from the Herzian waves when all they have to do is turn the dial."

Possible Showdown

He criticized "the intellectual pygmies in some federal government offices in Montreal who refuse to serve English-Canadians in English," and suggested their attitude was similar to those English-Canadians "who refuse to understand that a French-speaking pilot flying into Lorretteville wants to talk to the tower in French or he's going to crash."

Lalonde made it clear Sunday that Trudeau was not making a personal attack, except in a passing "jocular" way on Premier Bourassa. He agreed however that there were basic differences of opinion in some areas between federal and provincial Liberals.

One federal MP, Jacques Olivier (Liberal-Longeuil) attributed the surprise of some Quebeckers at Trudeau's remarks to the fact that they are not used to seeing their provincial premier criticized by Ottawa in the same way as other provincial premiers.

"We've taken a lot," he said, "from Quebec cabinet ministers and now some of it is being tossed back."

Nevertheless a great many people at last weekend's convention seemed to be doing some serious thinking about a possible showdown between Ottawa and Quebec City.

It would probably be good for both parties to be a little further apart.

GEORGE OAKE

Pathos of Fading Contrails

All of British Columbia's caterwauling and whining about Pacific Western Airlines' proposal to move its head office and maintenance base from Vancouver to Alberta usually misses a salient point. The Alberta government owns the company, lock, stock and airplanes.

It can do as it wishes with these assets. That's how the private enterprise system works, as local critics know so well.

Why anyone would move anything from British Columbia to Alberta is beyond the comprehension of xenophobic British Columbians. Yet if the Lougheed government's proposal is economically doubtful — something that is only predicted, not proven — it is politically sound.

Besides instantly creating more than 1,600 Alberta jobs, the move will inject meat and potatoes capital into the province's nascent aircraft industry. Naturally, certain capital costs would be incurred by such a move — estimates range between $4 and $5 million — but the prairie province is not exactly strapped for cash. And of course it is a major theme of Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed's administration to build secondary industry against the day when the wells run dry.

Fly in Ointment

The move, with its built in appeal to Alberta's nativist sentiment, not to mention potential industrial spinoffs, would also defang Lougheed's critics who originally characterized the airline purchase as "socialistic" and a "white elephant deal."

Those who point to PWA's fragile profit margin, citing moving costs and predicted increased operating expenditures forget it is generally cheaper to do business in Alberta. No sales tax and a stable labor scene should decrease some of PWA's expenses.

Who knows? In theory Lougheed could even sell jet fuel to his own airline at reduced prices, thereby cutting costs considerably. On political grounds the move is money well spent in terms of job creation alone. The federal government loaned or granted United Aircraft in Montreal nearly $80 million with less results than Alberta can expect from this $5 million deal.

Perhaps the only fly in the political ointment is the Canadian Transport Commission which is huffy because Alberta didn't inform it of plans to buy PWA. Usually, the CTC rubber stamps any proposal that will help industries it is supposed to regulate. Now it is in a touchy position, having to rule on the legality of Alberta's purchase.

In effect a federal commission is being forced to take sides in what has become a dispute between two provinces. A no win situation for federal Liberals who want to hang onto the few friends they can muster in this part of the country.

Here in B.C. the issue presents some delicious ironies.

PWA CARGO PLANE
. . . loading in Edmonton

We see the editorial writers, businessmen, chamber of commerce people and even a union going to the wall in support of a company's employees rather than its owners. A rare occurrence indeed among these eminently consistent groups. Nor has there ever been such handwringing in B.C.'s newspapers about the expenditure of a mere $5 million by a provincial government on the other side of the Rockies.

Had the NDP bought PWA these people would have screamed about socialist meddling in the private economy. Yet purchase of the airline would have prevented the probable move to Alberta.

Bemoaning this treachery from a highly touted ally has unhinged the establishment's conservative reasoning, it would seem.

It never occurs to these people that B.C. might have bought the airline too, thus avoiding the pathos of crying over fading contrails. Even to mention this alternative is of course heresy. Former Premier Barrett said his government had looked at PWA only to reject it. He made the statement after Alberta announced the purchase, though. As far as the Socred regime is concerned, it seems to strain its imagination just cancelling things.

If anything is to be learned from the current contretemps it is the importance of a mixed economy. Lougheed ignored traditional Conservative dogma and bought PWA to ensure Alberta's northern development position.

The Alberta premier did not want to see his province's increasingly important role as a northern supplier upstaged by a Vancouver based airline which would naturally channel business towards B.C. Nor did he want to see what has become an important Alberta transportation link subject to corporate whims of an absentee company, a company that a rival government might buy someday.

Muddy Ruts

Regardless of ideology, more Canadian governments will increasingly be involving themselves in the private sector, if only to preserve the economic status quo. Absentee companies sparked only by profit motives can't be expected to always act in the interests of local people. Ocean Falls proved that in B.C.

Certainly government should act judiciously and sparingly when it invades the unknown territory of private enterprise. But in an age of increasing scarcities resulting in selfish allocation, who are we to trust, our elected representatives or a foreign corporation with an appointed board of directors?

Alberta's Peter Lougheed ignored muddy ideological ruts that so often paralyze politics in B.C. He bought PWA so the people of Alberta would have some clout in regional transportation.

If whine we must, it should be over our own shortsightedness rather than Lougheed's vision.

letters

Fade Away Dave

I have been nothing short of fascinated by recent remarks by various members of the media claiming that every effort should be made to facilitate the return of Dave Barrett to the legislature.

I can understand people feeling a little sorry for a leader of a party and premier who loses his seat, but in fairness, what could be more fitting? Is it not a fact that the NDP decided to make Dave Barrett the central issue in the last campaign. "B.C. has strong leadership, let's keep it that way." That was their slogan and the people of B.C. rejected this as did the people in the former premier's home riding. Now the NDP expect that everything should be done to get this man back into the house by way of a byelection.

I suggest that the media and others would better serve the interests of B.C. by suggesting that the best thing for Dave Barrett to do would be to fade away. I suggest we serve notice now that the public has had it with dishonest politicians. We will not stand by any longer while they reward their friends and themselves at our expense. We demand frankness and honesty in government. In short, we do not need clowns and buffoons. We need decent, hard-working, and honest people in government. — K. D. Wray, Cordova Bay Road.

Stupich Program

I fully agree with your editorial "A Pathetic Cauldron of Curds" (Thurs., March 4th). Only Alice in Wonderland logic could support a system whereby the taxpayer of Canada is asked to subsidize a price support program which results in milk powder costing him 64 cents per pound to buy — while the same milk powder is being sold by Canada to its foreign customers (in order to get rid of it) at 14 cents per pound.

Still we have to protect the farmer. He deserves a decent living. We need to keep the farmer (and his sons) on the farm. They provide the food we need — and all the world needs.

It seems to me that the program devised by Dave Stupich, former minister of agriculture under the N.D.P. Government, might provide the answer. That program did not support the price of the farmer's product, but, instead, guaranteed the farmer a reasonable income for the product of his labors. A Provincial Board was set up which, each year, established a price that must be received for each product in order that the farmer might make a reasonable profit for his labors. If the price of the product fell below this level, the government then paid the farmer the difference, in order that he would not lose out.

This program has been very popular with the farmers, and keeps them "down on the farm." It does not, however, keep the price of the product artificially high. The taxpayer may have to subsidize the farmer, but, at least, as a consumer, he is not forced to pay an abnormally high price for the product. — Phil Fawcett, 57 Wellington Street.

Handling Insanity

I was pleased to see that some attention is being focused onto the problems of handling the criminally insane as per your February 14th article 'Sane People Held in Mental Hospital'. Even though a real problem does exist with the present procedures for the treatment and care of these types of offenders, I feel Dr. Duffy's attack on the government's attitude towards the criminally insane, their reluctance to release the 'cured' offenders is misdirected.

The government is caught in a very awkward position in regards to the handling of these people. They have in the past released patients on the advice of doctors yet soon after were blamed for disregarding the safety of the people when the patient committed further terrorist acts. They have kept the patients locked up yet received criticism for doing so if doctors deem the patients sane.

The weakness in this appears to be that the doctors charged with the care, treatment and evaluation of the offender's mental health have not proven themselves capable of carrying out these functions with a large enough degree of success to allow the government to trust their decisions.

One very important flaw which we have become aware of that is common to the whole mental health system, not just in the treatment of the criminally insane is a total lack of accountability of the failures within the system.

Perhaps our politicians would be wise to start demanding a written guarantee from the psychiatrist involved that they will be responsible for the behavior of their charges for three years after and be liable for damages caused.

Perhaps that is the way to make 'mental health' into the effective science it should be and get politics out of it.

I'd like to see our politicians give this a try.—Reverend R. G. Rockl, Chairman, Citizen's Commission on Human Rights

Officially English

I agree with Mayor Kurtz of Parksville that we should have English adopted as the official language of British Columbia.

My second language is Spanish due to our closeness to Mexico. If we must have a second language, why not Spanish? Or better yet Chinese — we have far more Chinese in B.C. than French. — J. A. Clarke, 555 Riel Place.

The Ministers: Vander Zalm

He Remembers When Times Really Tough

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

William Vander Zalm is a "certifiable redneck."

He lays claim to the title from early days in the nursery fields bending over a hoe in the hot summer sun. Like the southern farmers who gave the term its origin, Vander Zalm was left with a red neck and a philosophy to go with it.

Vander Zalm jokes about earning his redneck label by way of the hoe but he's more sensitive about acquiring it by way of philosophy.

B.C.'s new human resources minister doesn't consider himself a hard-liner, despite the reputation he developed in Surrey politics as a "welfare buster."

"I've always been a liberal and philosophically I don't think I've changed my views. I'm probably still fairly liberal, even though many people peg me 'way right," he said.

"My main aim isn't to get the 'bums' off welfare — because I don't think they're the majority. I think they're definitely a minority."

VANDER ZALM . . . images of hunger

Field work

But what Vander Zalm is concerned about is things like "responsibility . . . accountability . . . initiative . . . self-reliance."

He says he believes in the welfare state — "that society as a whole has a responsibility for everyone and to support those who can't support themselves" — but more importantly he believes "that the individual has a responsibility to be a productive part of the community."

Those years spent with hoe and shovel in the fields had a lot to do with shaping the philosophy that's become Vander Zalm's political trademark.

Born just outside Amsterdam in 1934, Vander Zalm was one of seven children born to a bulb salesman in an "average" Dutch family.

When the Second World War broke out Vander Zalm's father was stuck in Canada and couldn't get home for the duration of hostilities. His mother was left to take care of the family for six years without really knowing where her husband was.

Cold, hunger

The war years were tough and images of hunger and cold remain vivid in Vander Zalm's memory.

"We went through the winter of 1944 when there was no fuel whatsoever. The homes were cold; there was nothing to cook with. We scrounged branches and twigs and whatever we could find.

"Hunger was everywhere. The main diet was tulip bulbs. We'd spend day after day cutting bulbs in half, digging the flower out. We'd eat them raw; we'd grind them up; we'd bake them."

Vander Zalm remembers going from farmhouse to farmhouse begging for potatoes. Farmers would slice off a piece of potato and if you kept it up for three or four days running you might end up with a full sack.

It was a much different world when Vander Zalm emigrated to Canada with his family at the age of 12.

His father had established a bulb business in the Fraser Valley and since Vander Zalm couldn't speak English it was decided he should work in the fields for a few months before he started school.

Vander Zalm has been tied to the nursery business ever since. He had hopes to become a lawyer but when he finished high school his father suffered a heart attack so he stayed in the business instead.

"I was asked, or told, to take over my dad's travels to the Lakehead selling bulbs to florists.

"So I stayed with the nursery business for a good number of years and wasn't too interested in politics. I just built up the business."

After a few years of working the family business, he went into partnership and formed the Art Knapp nurseries. In 1953 he bought out his partner.

Vander Zalm said he doesn't "think" he is a millionaire although business is good. He denies his reputation as a big land dealer and says his total land holdings amount to about 20 acres.

Like father, like son, and the oldest of Vander Zalm's children is now running the business while the minister is in Victoria.

It was shrubs that originally got Vander Zalm into politics.

One of the parks near his Surrey home was about to be changed into a "gravel pit", and all of a sudden Vander Zalm was thrust into the world of politics.

He took a petition to Surrey council on behalf of the outraged and then donated some plants to the park in hopes it would make it harder to dig up.

Part of the park was dug up anyway and the unhappy petitioner decided to run for council. He was defeated on his first attempt but was elected in 1965 and served as alderman for four years. The next six years he was Surrey's mayor.

During that time he ran federally and provincially as a Liberal but was defeated in both attempts. It wasn't until he joined the Social Credit party that he found a wider electorate and on Dec. 11 was swept into office with the Social Credit landslide.

A handsome, charming individual with a straightforward speaking style and just a touch of an accent, Vander Zalm was a colorful mayor who grabbed headlines easily. Although a newcomer to the legislature it was expected he'd go straight into the cabinet.

Some cynical observers joked that Vander Zalm, with his reputation for cracking down on welfare recipients, might even be made human resources minister.

But the joke became a reality and as champagne glasses tinkled at the Government House swearing-in ceremony, Vander Zalm began to live up to his reputation with his now-famous "pick up their shovels" remark.

Since then the minister has stayed rather low-key, announcing crack-downs in a few areas but generally holding off on the kind of hard-line pronouncements a municipal politician can make with greater ease.

The "shovels" remark taught him his first lesson in provincial politics—what you say as a minister has a much greater impact than what you say as Surrey mayor.

But Vander Zalm defends the "shovels" statement.

"When I said people will have to pick up their shovels, I was relating that to work. In my business shovels equal work and I just meant that people who can work will have to work."

"If you don't already have a shovel, which means if you don't already have a job, we're going to find you a shovel, which means we're going to find you a job.

"I stand by that and that's a priority in my department."

Vander Zalm wants to have one over-riding philosophy on welfare: to help people who can't take care of themselves by giving them the best possible support and to help people who are capable of supporting themselves by giving them some motivation to help themselves.

There are probably only a few people, he said, who are genuinely too lazy to work. Most employables on welfare just need the impetus to get going.

'Turn tide'

One of the "real concerns" in the department, he said, is the tremendous upsurge in single parents. His discussion of the subject reflects his general concern with "responsibility."

"We tend to blame society for all the bad things that happen when very often it's the fault of an individual or several individuals."

Instead of just accepting single parenthood as the trend, he said the government has an obligation to try to "turn the tide" by ensuring "the departing husband lives up to his responsibility."

"One of the real problems is that there's no responsibility, no accountability in the system. Everyone tends to pass it off to the next person. If they can get away without paying their bills—if they can get away without living up to their obligations—that's the name of the game."

The department has never done anything to try to make people more responsible, he said, so a husband feels he can walk out on his family because he knows the government will support them.

'Bandaids'

Vander Zalm will not accept the suggestion that his office in Victoria cannot change society.

"The minister . . . can have a definite effect. You can't change the world overnight . . . but you can keep it from getting worse and maybe have a slight effect."

Vander Zalm talks a great deal about initiative and he believes his government can encourage it. The NDP government, he said, tended to squelch personal ambition.

But the human resources department has always been that way, it didn't change much under the NDP, he added.

"This department has always worked with bandaids—bandaid upon bandaid, program upon program—with no real plan where we are going.

"We're going to work towards one over-all program, one over-all plan. I don't suppose we will do away with the bandaids entirely but we'll try to plan for the needs of people in the long range."

MINOW . . . warned of wsteland

BERGMAN . . . his films on BBC

Britain Rules the Air Waves

By KARL E. MEYER
Saturday Review

It is good for the soul to reread on occasion the most famous outburst provoked by American television. Speaking in 1961, Newton Minow, then chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, asked an audience of broadcasters to glue its eyes to the screen. Mr. Minow went on:

"I can assure you that you will observe a vast wasteland. You will see a procession of game shows, violence, audience participation shows, formula comedies about totally unbelievable families, blood and thunder, mayhem, violence, sadism, murder, western badmen, western good men, private eyes, gangsters, more violence, and cartoons. And, endlessly, commercials—many screaming, cajoling, and offending."

In 15 years, has anything really changed? To be sure, we have today, thanks in part to the efforts of Minow himself, the beginnings of a national public-television network. But the commercial screen is as inexcusably mediocre as it was in 1961, and the game shows—though this is hard to believe—are more mindless than ever.

Something else is unchanged. In the great wasteland of English-language broadcasting, there is a conspicuous oasis: British television. I recently spent a busman's holiday in Britain, with my eyes glued to the set over a 12-day period. I lived in England from 1965 to 1970, and thus had a basis for comparison, since those were the halcyon years when Sir Hugh Greene was director-general of BBC. I was curious whether British television, like the pound sterling, had slipped, and it has — but not much. However tattered her hems, Britannia still rules the airwaves.

The old weaknesses persist. The news programs are so bland and toothless they make one long for CBS. The items are little more than bulletins from the Reuters wire that announcers recite in a genteel speak-your-weight voice. Oddly, the best daily news program is still on radio—the splendid BBC "World at One," which regularly scoops television. As far as news goes, if it were not for supplementary shows like the magazine-style "Panorama" program on BBC, the screen would be a disaster area.

Moreover, British situation comedy normally runs the entire gamut of wit from A to B, to borrow a phrase from Dorothy Parker. I saw two dreadful "Carry On" films on BBC, in which the humor was so broad as to make Lucille Ball seem a paragon of subtlety. Doubtless it is my provincial American bias, but repeated double-entendre references to women's knickers (i.e., underwear) failed to get any rise out of me—to risk the kind of line that British audiences seemingly find hilarious.

In short, there is some very British trash, which we never see here. But at the same time you can invariably switch the dial and find champagne as well as junk food, for the enviable merit of the British system is that the viewer has a wide field of choice. This is true, paradoxically, even though there are only three channels (BBC 1 and 2, and Independent television) and the broadcasting day is abbreviated. In Britain, less is emphatically more.

So it was that while in England I was able to see more quality programming in less than two weeks than would be possible in six months on our commercial screen. To cite some examples, I saw a superb BBC nature documentary on the African shoebill, a musical portrait of the American jazzman Earl Hines, a Covent Garden performance of La Boheme, and a fascinating off-beat biography of Lord Haw Haw, — the American-born traitor William Joyce who was hanged for his wartime broadcasts from Berlin.

This last program gave one a weird backward glance at the Battle of Britain from the perspective of a crackpot—Joyce's final, drunken broadcast made the skin prickle. More topically, I watched on BBC a five-part panel discussion on feminism, moderated by Ludovic Kennedy, in which passionate views were expressed with civility, striking a note missing in comparable debates here.

The choice of films was bountiful. During the Christmas holidays, viewers could see Women in Love, Modern Times, Lawrence of Arabia, Born Free, The Lion in Winter, Chisum, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, an entire Bogart festival, and—as a bonus—Ingmar Bergman's just-released Magic Flute. These were shown for the most part without commercial breaks, but even on Independent television (the commercial channel), the blurbs are sensibly spaced at half-hour intervals. Because of this spacing, American imports, like "Kojak," have greater dramatic impact because the story-flow is not constantly broken by huckstering interruptions.

As for game shows, the emphasis, incredibly, is on skill, not greed. Prizes are nominal. A big winner on "Password," a catchy word game, will get the equivalent of about $50. The most successful of game shows is "Mastermind," which has soared in ratings even though the BBC quizmaster asks brainy contestants almost impossibly esoteric questions. I saw the grand payoff, in which all annual winners since 1972 were pitted against each other. The winner of "Supermind" turned out to be a woman whose specialty was the history of Malta until 1500.

There were a halfdozen dramatic serials in progress, including a well-done "Robin Hood" for children. I was especially impressed by "Poldark," a 16-part melodrama set in 18th-century Cornwall, and by the opening episode of "Clayhanger," a 26-part dramatization of Arnold Bennett's novel about the industrial Midlands (produced by Independent television, not BBC).

Still, British proficiency in these serials is now solidly established. I had the feeling that British broadcasters have something like a second-act problem. They have done so much, so well, within accepted modes that the challenge seems to be lacking.

That sense of challenge could spur American television. We have nowhere to go but up. It would be an admirable thing if our public-television network commissioned a full-length documentary on the British system—showing samples of the best and the worst. It would be useful to learn how British broadcasters, operating on far lower budgets, turn out so much superior work. If nothing else, the American wasteland is prodigiously profitable, and if a little of that money was better used, we would not have to travel to Britain to see television's promise fulfilled.

Is This the Good Life?

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

"When I think of Nova Scotia," said the woman on the telephone, "I think of a place where you don't have to explain yourself. Everybody knows about you, the good and the bad. They know all your family, too.

"If you want to fight with your husband in public, you fight with him in public. If you want to buy a little present for somebody else, you don't have to stop and think about it first and worry about whether it will be understood."

The woman had a burden to unload and it had to be on someone who at least had seen Nova Scotia and knew something of what it was like; that it wasn't the same as New Brunswick or Prince Edward Island, that it is yet a place where the people march to a different drum.

She had been in British Columbia for three years and was wracked with home sickness for the sea, for the small towns, the clannishness and yes, even the quaint habit of conducting social conversations which sound as though they came straight from the begats of the book of Genesis.

When she and her husband and two small children came here in 1972 they lived first in an apartment block.

She set to work promptly to make social calls on all the other occupants of the building, one suite at a time day by day. Although she describes herself as an ordinary, middle-aged housewife she must exhibit a shining innocence that some of them didn't phone the police or insist that she reveal what she was trying to sell but apparently that didn't happen.

Before she left the building she had the name and marital rank of every soul there and noticed only that in Vancouver, people are very stand offish.

She wasn't cured by the time they bought their house in the suburbs. Soon after moving in she arrived at a neighbor's house bearing a loaf of Johnny Cake, she'd baked some extra, perhaps they'd like some?

"This girl and I did become friends later, enough that she felt she could tell me how much I'd startled her that day. She had lived in that neighborhood for 14 years and nobody had ever before come over with the present of a few cookies or a piece of cake.

"I couldn't believe it. I still find it hard to believe. At home everybody trades cooking. We don't have to have any reason for it. It's just fun to do it."

The funny thing is, said the woman on the telephone, British Columbians seem to believe that people down east are very formal and stand on ceremony when in fact, it's just the reverse.

"It's the people here who build up walls around themselves.

"Often I'm downtown and I see some little thing that somebody I know might like and I'm afraid to buy it for them because how will it be taken? Will it make them feel obligated to me? Will they understand I'm just doing it because I feel like doing it? I don't think many will.

"You have to be introduced, like in the old jokes about Englishmen on desert islands and anyway an introduction isn't enough, you have to know somebody a long time before it's permissible to go visiting them without an invitation."

"Also, and you call it snobbery if you want to, I was brought up in Nova Scotia with the clear understanding that good manners were more important than money and to be honest I wonder sometimes if my kids are going to grow up here with an unhealthy interest in money.

"Most people out here have far more material goods than the Nova Scotians ever see but they're missing things in the good life which we took for granted in a little town in Nova Scotia and being natural and open with other people was one of them."

Then she excused herself for rambling on. The family doctor was coming for dinner that night. He's a Nova Scotian. She chose him when she found out his nationality. Tonight they will eat housebanker which, for those who don't know, is fish and potatoes — plain, simple and nourishing.

Sidney to Pay Rec 'Blackmail'

Sidney council voted Monday to pay the money requested by North Saanich for services near the planned Peninsula recreation centre, but the request is still a "form of blackmail," Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm said today.

"We tried to think of the over-all view, of the good it would do for the whole community," Malcolm said, "and I guess we decided we were prepared to be blackmailed."

Sidney will have to pay $147,000 over three years, $49,000 a year, as its share of the auxiliary services for the recreation centre planned for the Dean Park area of North Saanich.

The services include street lights on East Saanich Road, sidewalks or footpaths in the area and repairs to the road necessary because of increased traffic.

Central Saanich is also being asked to pay $147,000 but has not yet made a decision.

North Saanich Mayor Paul Grieve attended the Sidney council meeting Monday to make his plea for the money.

"I'm not [illegible] to stage a holdup for $147,000," Grieve said.

He said it would be unfair for North Saanich to have to pay for the upgrading of facilities which would be used by residents from all three municipalities.

Malcolm said today North Saanich uses Sidney facilities, such as the senior citizens centre and Sanscha Hall, and contributes very little for these services.

But, he said, council decided it didn't want to "kill the whole thing for $49,000 for three years."

In other council business, aldermen heard from one person trying to set up a bicycle racing track and from another resident trying to stop the track.

Jim Bamford, the 17-year-old organizer of the track, said he hopes to form a club, and, if the track is built, hold bike races every two weeks.

The town's public works department picked Cranmore Park as the most suitable place for the construction of the 15-foot wide oval dirt track, but nearby residents have signed a petition protesting the track.

H. W. Hollingsworth said Cranmore was a neighborhood park, "not a Sidney playground."

Mayor Malcolm said he thought some of the residents who signed the petition may not have known what it was all about.

He talked to one person who had been going to sign because he thought the track was for motor bike races, the mayor said.

Council will continue looking for suitable sites.

ARTHRITIS CLINIC OPEN

A local clinic of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society was officially opened by Health Minister Bob McClelland today.

The clinic, at 317 Cook St., will primarily be used to provide physiotherapy to patients crippled by arthritis. It was opened with the help of a $35,000 gift from an anonymous donor.

Aid to CARS patients was formerly provided at Gorge Road Hospital but the clinic was forced to relocate because of hospital expansion plans. The Cook Street clinic is the first of its kind separate from a hospital in B.C.

Broadbent Drops Greenpeace

Times News Services

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — Ed Broadbent, national NDP leader, says he no longer supports the Greenpeace Foundation in its opposition to the Newfoundland seal hunt.

Broadbent told a news conference here Monday his earlier comments opposing the seal hunt were based on evidence provided him "by people in central Canada and by Greenpeace."

He was not questioning their motives or their honesty but they gave him "one-sided evidence," he added.

However, about two weeks ago a Newfoundland fishermen got in touch with him and "gave me very persuasive evidence" for the continuance of the hunt.

This was confirmed by talks he had in St. John's Monday with local party officials, he said.

He has learned that the hunt provides a considerable income for some people, that conservation is being carried out and that the herd can't be permitted to get too large because it would have a serious impact on the fishery, he said.

Thirteen members of the Greenpeace Foundation, meanwhile, trying to reach the northern tip of Newfoundland to disrupt the hunt were delayed by snow-blocked roads today.

The group, travelling by bus, reached Plum Point, about 85 miles southwest of St. Anthony, before being forced to halt. The mainly unpaved highway between here and Plum Point was impassable in many sections early today, but improving weather conditions were expected to permit snowplows to clear the road.

Meanwhile, St. Anthony residents plan to meet the Greenpeace bus on the highway at a point west of the town to explain their position on the hunt.

2 Months Adrift

TOKYO (AP) — Four Gilbert Islanders who drifted in the South Pacific for more than two months after their small fishing boat ran out of fuel were picked up Saturday by a Japanese fishing vessel, the Maritime Safety Agency said.

An agency spokesman said the four were found in surprisingly good condition 1,800 miles southeast of their home island of Tarawa which they had left Dec. 18 on a fishing trip.

The 280-ton Japanese fishing vessel reported that the four survived on fish they had caught and water they had trapped during rain squalls as they drifted on their one-ton boat.

Troubled Airline Flies On

VANCOUVER (CP) — A receiver-manager has been appointed for Trans-Provincial Airlines Ltd. of Terrace.

The company is in financial difficulty mainly because of a decline in mineral prospecting. It operates 24 aircraft out of Terrace, about 100 miles east of Prince Rupert.

W. H. McRae, a director and a Terrace sawmill operator, said the problem is insufficient cash flow, too many aircraft on the ground and too few in the air. He said this resulted from "the miners leaving the country and disappearance of mining exploration in northwest B.C." This has affected freight, scheduled passenger flights and charter work.

Ian Bell of Touche Ross and Co., chartered accountants, has been named receiver-manager.

"The services will continue to the points we have been serving," said McRae. "The employees will be protected and have jobs."

President of Trans-Provincial, G. E. Reum, said the company asked for a receiver-manager "to ensure that the company would carry on their normal business and thereby protect customers, staff and creditors."

Victim Met Pair In Lounge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man whose body was found wrapped in a carpet near the Fraser River last April 20 met two men in a Burnaby cocktail lounge just prior to his disappearance, a British Columbia Supreme Court jury was told Monday.

Mrs. Alice Doty, who said she was living with Edward Senger, 43, at the time of his death, told Mr. Justice E. Davie Fulton and the jury that Senger talked with two men at the lounge late April 18 and she said she thinks the men were Marvin Gene Cavanagh and Joseph Patrick Howden.

Robert Ross Johnston, Cavanagh and Howden are charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment in connection with Senger's death.

Senger's body, rolled in a carpet that had been tied with what appeared to be clothes line wire, was discovered by a fisherman.

Mrs. Doty testified Senger asked her to leave the lounge and go to another hotel bar to wait for him. She said she never saw him alive again.

She said Senger some years ago was given 10 years in prison in connection with a drug charge.

Vancouver Author, 82, Dies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Annabelle Hill, 82, a Vancouver author and member of a pioneer British Columbia family, died Sunday in a private hospital.

Born at Cowichan Lake, she was the youngest and last survivor of the 10 daughters of Angus C. Fraser, a New Brunswick lumberman who settled near Victoria in 1868.

She taught school before moving to the United States where she became a prolific writer and lecturer in both New York and Hollywood.

A number of her plays were produced on CBC Radio.

Bias Test Challenge

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Three public interest groups have formally started a two-day appeal in the Supreme Court of Canada against an earlier decision by the Federal Court of Appeal that rejected charges of bias or fear of bias levelled against the chairman of the National Energy Board in the currently-suspended Mackenzie Valley gas pipeline hearings.

Legal counsel speaking jointly for the Canadian Justice and Liberty Foundation a non-denominational religious group, the Canadian Arctic Resources Committee, an environmental group, and the Consumers Association of Canada argued that the Federal Court of Appeal had improperly applied a test to determine whether or not there is sufficient fear of bias on the part of Marshall Crowe to disqualify him from the pipeline hearings.

"The test applied by the Federal Court of Appeal wrongly suggests a contrast between, on the one hand, a person of 'sensitive and scrupulous conscience' and, on the other hand, a person who is informed, practical, realistic and 'has thought the matter through,' as if these qualities were mutually exclusive."

The Federal Court of Appeal had found that Crowe's prior association with, and participation in decisions of, the Canadian Arctic Gas Study Group parent company of one of the northern gas applicants now before the NEB "might give rise in a very sensitive or scrupulous conscience to the uneasy suspicion that he might be unconsciously biased, and therefore should not serve."

But the Federal Court of Appeal went on to reject this as the test to apply in this case.

Cassidy Students Stall

NANAIMO (CP) — Only 48 of 84 students enrolled at Waterloo Elementary School at Cassidy, south of here, appeared for classes Monday as parents continued to protest lack of protection at a nearby railway crossing.

The protest began last Wednesday when a nine-year-old girl, a student at the school, died when struck by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway dayliner earlier in the week.

About 40 students attended school last Thursday and less than 25 were present Friday.

Residents of the small community were to meet Wednesday at the school to plan a campaign for better crossing protection.

The Nanaimo school board does not have a guard to help usher children across the tracks, although the parents have requested one. The level crossing is marked by the standard cross posts but contains no lights and no barriers.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Emotional Emergency Centre is closing this week because of the provincial government's refusal to grant a $133,000 budget to it, David Myers, staff member in charge of finances and funding, said Sunday. Myers said the closure of the centre will mean that persons who would have been helped will end up at more expensive facilities or will go without help.

Before The Judge

Dislike for a poster brought a 30-day jail sentence, a two-year term of probation and a $186 compensation order for Henry Ralph Harvey, 62, no fixed address in provincial court Monday.

Harvey pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of mischief Feb. 13 when he threw a piece of wood through a glass door of the B.C. recreation and conservation offices, 512 Fort, and pushed over two planters.

He was caught by three off-duty RCMP officers who were passing by and told police that "I didn't like the poster in the window of the girl holding a baby." Indications were he had been drinking.

Kevin Angus Payne, 21, of 525 Francis, was remanded by Ostler to March 24 for a pre-sentence report and sentence following a plea of guilty to a Victoria charge of a break-in with intent Feb. 29 at Gordon's Sporting Goods, 1030 Hillside.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said a store owner stopped Payne "when the accused tried to escape." He said a collection of 22 shotguns was found near the back door and, in the same area, police found a loaded 12-gauge shotgun and a police radio monitor.

Robert Alexander Landrin, 33, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to two Victoria charges and was remanded by Ostler to March 25 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

The first was the theft of a $50 sweater Feb. 20 from the T. Eaton Co. and the second was a Saturday evening break-in at Rose's Jewellers, 1317 Douglas, and theft of three watches worth a total of $790.

Birkett said a citizen saw a man use a wine bottle to smash a $300 window and grab the watches, leaving the bottle behind, then followed the man to Broad Street. There, the citizen met a foot-patrol policeman who arrested Lanarin.

Robert Bruce Rosin, 22, of 608 Nelson, was charged with possession of hashish Saturday in the Sidney area for trafficking and also with theft of a pair of jeans Feb. 26 from a Saanich store. He was remanded to today for a bail hearing and possible choice of trial method on the narcotics charge.

In traffic court Monday, Judge F. S. Green ordered impaired driver courses for four persons who pleaded guilty to separate charges resulting from driving while drinking.

The four were: Christopher Leonard Campbell, 26, of 838 Verdier, stopped Feb. 25 for impaired driving in Victoria, fined $350; Gerald Edward Brown, 22, of 1261 Goldstream, stopped Wednesday for being impaired in Colwood while in care or control of a vehicle, fined $350; John Arthur Gerrand, 54, of 614 Kildew, stopped Wednesday for impaired driving in Colwood, fined $350, and Herbert Stephen Kergin, 21, of 2625 Carboro Bay, stopped Feb. 29 for driving in Victoria with a breath-analysis reading of more than .08 per cent, fined $275.

Morris and Bolcom

COMPOSER HERE

The first of two important composers coming to University of Victoria to perform and lecture arrives this week.

William Bolcom, whose field of interest in music ranges widely but whose central focus is the classic popular song, began the study of composition at University of Washington at the age of 11.

He also studied with Darius Milhaud and at the Paris Conservatoire. He won his doctorate at Stanford University and since 1968 has been a free-lance composer, pianist, composer-in-residence at Yale Drama School and New York University School of the Arts, and writer of articles on musical subjects.

On Thursday, in partnership with soprano Joan Morris, he will appear in a concert of popular classical song at 12:30 p.m. at the MacLaurin Auditorium.

Bolcom and Morris have performed together to critical acclaim at Carnegie Hall, the Smithsonian Institute and on the Nonesuch label.

At Thursday's concert, which is open to the public, the duo will perform works of Irving Berlin, Gershwin, Scott Joplin, Artie Matthews, Cole Porter, Rodgers and Hart and others.

Next week one of Canada's most internationally noted composers, John Weinzweig, will be a guest of UVic music department for several days and will give a public lecture on March 18.

"What does Odlum Brown say?"

Although the stock market has risen sharply since the turn of the year the general level of stock prices in both Canada and the United States is still no higher than it was ten years ago. Yet during this period corporate earnings and dividends have grown substantially. We think the stock market can rise much further this year to record its first forward progress in ten years. Phone or write us for a copy of our March market and we will tell you why.

Toronto, N.Y. Make Hefty Gains

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market recorded some hefty gains in busy mid-afternoon trading Tuesday, influenced by a sharp advance at New York.

Moving against the market trend, the index of gold shares lost 2.29 to 324.58.

Volume by 2 p.m. was 1.76 million shares, down from 1.80 million at the same time Monday. Gains led advances 208 to 166 with 227 issues unchanged.

Trading in shares of Gordon Mackay and Stores Ltd. was delayed from opening at the company's request pending an announcement. Gordon MacKay A last closed at $6½.

IBM rose 2 to $257, Falconbridge Nickel ⅞ to $35¾, Inco A ¾ to $32¼, Seagram ¾ to $29½ and Noranda Mines A ¾ to $35¼.

Huron and Erie Mortgage A fell ⅞ to $24⅛, Bow Valley ½ to $16¾, Robinson Little A 50 cents to $1.75 and Imperial Oil A ⅛ to $23½.

Afton gained ¾ to $7⅛, Bethlehem Copper A ⅜ to $13⅞ and Denison ¼ to $59¾. Campbell Red Lake was down ¾ to $26 and Dickenson ¼ to $6.

PanCanadian Pete added ¼ to $20⅝. Ranger lost ⅜ to $16⅜, Pan Ocean ¼ to $12⅝ and Sunningdale ⅛ to $7⅞.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices among senior industrials were mixed in moderate trading Tuesday on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. was 447,100 shares, compared with 348,500 shares traded up to the same time Monday.

Alcan Aluminium was up ¼ at $26⅛, Abitibi Paper ⅛ at $13⅛ and BP Canada ½ at $10½. Steinberg's Ltd. A was off ½ at $18¾, Baton Broadcasting ⅛ at $8, Celanese Canada ¼ at $6¼ and Massey-Ferguson ½ at $30¾.

London

AT LONDON, stock prices were mixed in quiet trading Tuesday. The Financial Times index slipped 0.1 to 411.4 by the close of trading. Bank and oil shares drifted lower after opening a little stronger. Canadian issues were generally higher in light trading.

New York Tests 1,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market hovered around the 1,000 mark in the Dow Jones industrial average today, actually passing that landmark twice in the session.

The Dow had an 11.10-point gain at 999.84 at 2 p.m. Thirty minutes earlier, the average had a reading of 1,000.08 and about 45 minutes after trading began Tuesday, the Dow made it to 1,001.

The 1,000 level had been reached in only two other periods in New York Stock Exchange history—for a few brief moments in January 1966, and more lastingly in the winter of 1972-73 when the Dow set its record high of 1,051.70.

The last close above the 1,000 mark was Feb. 13, 1973.

Gainers led losers by a 2-to-1 margin in active trading among NYSE-listed issues.

Sony Corp. was the NYSE volume leader, adding ⅛ to $8⅝, including a 121,000-share block at $8½.

J.C. Penney, reporting sharply higher 53-week profits, rose 2⅝ to $57½.

Among other gainers, Halliburton was up 3¾ to $144¾, U.S. Steel 2 to $87 and Kodak 2¼ to $111½.

VOGELS BUY BACK CLOVERDALE PAINT

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vogel family has acquired full control of Cloverdale Paint and Chemicals Ltd. after buying back Kelly, Douglas and Company, Ltd.'s share in the company.

Walter (Wink) Vogel is president of Cloverdale after being fired last year over his efforts to buy back control.

Over several years in the mid-1960s, Kelly, Douglas had bought 54 per cent of Cloverdale's common stock from the Vogels, who kept 46 per cent. Kelly, Douglas sold it back in January because it did not fit in with their food business, the company said.

Cloverdale has not bee profitable, but Vogel said Kelly, Douglas had bough an interest in the paint company with the intention of expanding it. Profits and rapid expansion do not go together, he said.

Cloverdale grew from seven stores in the late 1960s to 25 at present. It also bought Monarch Paint in Alberta, Sidney Paint Supply Ltd. on Vancouver Island and built a new factory.

Annual sales have grown by 29 per cent in recent years, Vogel said, having gone from about half a million dollars when Kelly, Douglas bought control to $8 million last year.

Canadians Bag Contract in Saudi Arabia

OTTAWA (CP) — Fred Farha tried last year to expand from his Ottawa based real estate development business to form a Canadian-Arab development consortium that would — for a fee — assist member companies in making business deals in the oil-rich Arab states.

But there were few takers. Farha, a 41-year-old Lebanese-born Canadian with experience in the international money markets, said Canadian companies were not convinced they could crack the Arab market.

So the consortium concept was "put on ice" and Farha went looking for opportunities for his own Fundmore Corp. (Canada) Ltd. Saudi Arabia was chosen as the prime target after several scouting trips during which business contracts were made and renewed.

Last week, Farha and two associates returned with a $37 million contract for the design and construction of a group of apartment buildings in Riyadh, the Saudi Arabian capital.

They believe it is the first major deal obtained by a Canadian company in the Arab world, with the exception of consulting contracts.

Under the contract, Fundmore and several associated Ontario construction and design companies will build a 350-unit housing unit for Prince Bandar Bin Muhammed Bin Abdul-Rahman A-Saud, nephew of the Saudi king.

It will feature 10 buildings of six storeys grouped around a swimming pool and shopping arcade. Construction is to begin Aug. 1 with completion planned for October, 1978.

The turn-key project, in which the Canadian companies will be responsible for all details, will involve importing 150 skilled workers from other countries and the hiring of about 150 local laborers. Temporary recreation and housing facilities for the imported workers are to include a swimming pool and billiard tables.

In addition, Fundmore and the companies working with it will buy and transport to Riyadh about $3 million worth of equipment, "everything from pencils to bulldozers."

Farha said the equipment investment is being made with the conviction that other contracts will follow. He said offers to design and build two hotels and a shopping centre were declined on the recent trip so the company could concentrate on "making a first-class show" of the apartments.

Previously, the six-year-old Fundmore Corp. and three other companies in the Farha Group have won contracts for designing, building, managing and arranging financing for residential, commercial and industrial projects in Canada, the United States and Caribean countries.

Farha is convinced the potential for Canadian companies in the Arab world is enormous, and he hopes success of his own companies in Saudi Arabia will generate faith in the cencept of the Canadian-Arab development consortium.

Business opportunities are currently being lost to British, French, German and Japanese firms who have financial help from their governments.

Farha said Canadian companies should receive subsidies from the government to compete for contracts in Arab states.

What the companies need the most, however, is assistance in locating business opportunities and in Arab negotiating methods, language and culture.

Farha said the development consortium could provide this assistance. He admitted to having an edge on other Canadians with his background in and knowledge of the Arab world — he writes and speaks Arabic — and business contacts from two years of arranging private financing for projects on the international money market in Zurich, Switzerland.

The Fundmore contract was negotiated promptly over a four-day weekend in sessions that included lamb feasts. It followed an introduction to the prince by a business friend on a trip last November.

"The introduction to a prospective client is usually as important or even more important than your service or product," Farha said.

Fundmore spent $35,000 on developing a concept for the apartments without guarantee of any payment. This was necessary "to prove we were serious." He said the Arabs abhor detailed contracts and insist on honor to cover a myriad of details that Westerners would include in a contract.

The apartment deal, for example, was covered in a nine-page bilingual — Arabic and English — contract while comparable Fundmore contracts in Canada run to 100 or more pages.

And then there is the heading on the Saudi Arabian contract: "In the name of God most beneficial and merciful."

Long-Term Deals Urged by Mission

BRUSSELS (AP) — A Ca-10-day tour of Western nadian mission, concluding a Europe, has urged the Common Market countries to make long-term deals to buy Canadian forest products.

"Europeans have tended to deal on a short-term basis only," said L. C. Howey, mission leader and head of the Canadian trade department resources branch.

"Our mission has tried to convey the message that in a market where supplies could become tighter, long-term agreements deserve consideration," he added in an interview Friday.

"One goal of this mission was to investigate possibilities to develop a better distribution of the forest-based industry trade, making it less subject to the swings of the U.S. market."

European buyers tend to concentrate on supplies from Scandinavian countries "because Scandinavian forest industry tends toward exporting finished products rather than wood pulp," Howey said. "We told the Europeans that for us, pulp buiness was fine."

The mission, which included Canadian businessmen as well as government officials, urged European companies to consider joining with Canadian companies in investing in Canadian forest-based industries.

"There are plenty of opportunities," he said. "We estimate that about 50 per cent of our forest resources remain to be exploited."

Scandinavian forest products enter the Common market duty free while Canadian products are still subject to a duty of 12 per cent which will be reduced to eight per cent. The Canadian mission urged the Common Market to revise it spolicy to end discrimination.

Another problem is waterlining — the marking of newsprint used by newspapers to differentiate the product from newsprint used for other purposes, such as telephone directories. Different duties are applied. The Canadian mission argued that waterlining is obsolete in the modernized manufacturing of newsprint.

Howey said the Common Market must decide by June 30 whether to maintain the waterlining of newsprint or to abandon the rule. He said waterlining is enforced only in Italy.

Tense Finishes in Brier; Sparkes Rebounds for Two

REGINA (CP) — Cliff-hangers and pressure shots were the order of the day Monday in the Canadian Men's curling championship, and through it all Wayne Sokolosky of Calgary emerged as the clear-cut leader after four rounds.

Sokolosky, who has been consistently in command of his draw weight, used it to effect in defeating Clare DeBlonde of Winnipeg 6-5 in an extra end in a split third draw.

The result gave him a 3-0 record, with his next closest rival being Dave Sullivan of Fredericton, N.B., who made probably the biggest shot so far in the championship in defeating Joe Gurowka of Mississauga, Ont., 8-7 in an extra end.

Sullivan held a 3-1 record with the victory followed by Howard Brazeau of Fort Smith, N.W.T., who was 2-1.

The field was tighter after that with four teams sharing fourth spot with 2-2 records. They were Jack MacDuff of St. John's, Nfld., Northern Ontario's Rick Lang of Thunder Bay, Alf Romain of Halifax and Bernie Sarkes of Burnaby, B.C.

In the third round, split between morning and afternoon draws in which all 12 teams saw action, B.C. defeated Saskatchewan 8-3 in 11 ends, the Territorises used an extra end to defeat Quebec 5-4, Alberta needed an extra end to dispose of Manitoba 6-5, Nova Scotia edged Northern Ontario 6-5, New Brunswick defeated Newfoundland 8-5 and Ontario nipped P.E.I. 6-5.

In the fourth round at night, with a bye going to Alberta, B.C. defeated Quebec 4-3, Manitoba beat P.E.I. 5-3, Nova Scotia handled Saskatchewan 9-7, New Brunswick beat Ontario 8-7 and Northern Ontario defeated Newfoundland 11-7.

The match between Sarkes and Ursel produced a record-tieing seven blank ends and set a record for the fewest points scored in regulation ends.

An Alberta-Quebec championship game in 1974 in London set the record for blank ends while the previous lowest-scoring game was a 4-3 match in Fredericton last year won by Saskatchewan over Quebec.

Sparkes, who had trouble Sunday with "opening-day jitters and a couple of bad rocks" that didn't react consistently the same way, came back strongly Monday to defeat Ursel. He said the turning point came in the fifth end when he made a double takeout to score two and go ahead 2-1.

There were two pressure shots that stood out as possibly the day's best, one involving Bob Charlebois who throws skip rocks for Ontario, and the other by Sullivan of New Brunswick.

Charlebois made his shot in the 12th end of a game against P.E.I. to allow Ontario to count three and force an extra end. His come-around takeout had to be executed correctly to remove the shot P.E.I. stone without disturbing three Ontario counters.

Sullivan's shot also got his team out of serious trouble in the 12th end of a game against Ontario. He dismissed a possible draw with last rock to go for an in-line double takeout and while he rolled out himself it forced an extra end and he won.

BEATING THE PANTS OFF a fighter is an accepted part of the boxing game as witness in this bout in New Orleans, La. While the referee gives Andre Love an assist in trying to keep his drawers up, Maurice Quillan takes advantage and gets in a couple of quick hits. Love lost the bout but he never did lose his pants. At least not completely, that is. (AP Wirephoto)

Basketball: Hopefully Like Old Times Again

That had to be an impressive performance by the Victoria Scorpions in the provincial men's basketball championship at the old UVic gymnasium on the weekend.

Not only did the Scorpions come on strongly in the second half of each game against the Vancouver Athletics, but the fact that some of the players were obviously off color in the opening game Saturday made the contribution of the other members of the club that much more noteworthy.

For instance, coach Walt Burrows and his assistant Rick Mark substituted liberally in the Saturday game because it was felt that the flu, which had flattened three players — Bob Burrows, Brian MacKenzie and Dave Morgan — earlier in the week, might take its toll, especially if the going happened to get heavy and the score close. And the Scorpion "bench" rose to the occasion admirably. Everyone hit the scoresheet and if the Scorpions have been looking for an outside shooter to go with Burrows inside, they've got it. Gord Hoshal was impressive indeed when he was within his range and it seemed he could be set up more often.

But now things won't get any easier. With Raymond Union Jacks here for a playoff test this weekend, the Scorpions will get a measure of what to expect in the Canadian.

★ ★ ★

Besides, now the national tournament takes on added significance because of the presence of a city team. It's been a long time for Victoria, once considered the capital of the game. But that was 'way back when, and for those who weren't there and others who may have forgotten, it was in 1933 that the national title first came to the city.

That was the year of the Blue Ribbons; and the same club repeated again in 1935. Some of the notables of the time were the Chapmans, Art and Chuck; the Patricks, Lynn and Muzz; Tommy Little, Alex McKeachie, Claude Sluggett, Doug Peden, George Andrews, Alf McKeown, Joe Ross, Johnny Craig, Bill Wallis, Red Martin.

And it was in that 1935 season that the Ribbons defeated Assumption College right here for the national title.

But before that series, hey, did they have some rhubarbs? Nobody took defeat lightly in that era. For instance when the UBC Thunderbirds had been dispatched after a torrid five-game series in the provincial final, did they say "Nicely done, Ribbons"?

No way. They promptly filed an 11-count indictment against the Ribbons, the Victoria fans and one of the referees. They charged among other sundry items that the floor wasn't regulation because the overflow crowd overflowed on its boundaries, substitutions could not be properly made because of the crowd and the noise, and that their players were intimidated by a bombardment of foreign matter from the fans. Officials tossed out the protest and the Ribbons' final game victory, a 37-36 squeaker, was allowed to stand. But not without a warning. If it happened again in Victoria, the game would be defaulted.

★ ★ ★

After that Victoria fans became more sophisticated and three other national titles followed. The Dominoes, followers of the Blue Ribbons, won the Canadian championship in 1939; Pat Bay Gremlins took the honor in 1943 and the Dominoes returned after the war to win in 1946.

Since then, no Victoria team has made it to the Nationals although the Island was ably represented several times, including a national championship by the Alberni Athletics in 1955. Alberni, in its heyday, won seven provincial titles.

More recently, Vancouver Capilanos have been the power in the west. The Caps won last year's Dogwood playoff from the Scorpions, who had been favored because of their league championship, and finished third in the Canadian. The year previous, in 1974, the Capilanos were the Canadian champs.

So the Scorpions have gotten by some pretty good company this season, including a tremendous shooter in Derek Sankey of the Athletics on the weekend. But they did it in fine style, which wasn't the case last season; and the fact they were below par physically and still won handily is a credit to the coaching staff and the team bench for coming up big when the supreme effort was needed most.

It's been a long time since 1946. That was when the last dynasty ended, the Victoria team being named the basketball team of the half-century.

Big shoes to fill? Certainly. But the Scorpions appear ready to give it a try. A good one. Just as they did on the weekend. In addition, they can always call on outside help — three players, that is; and it's just a thought, but wouldn't Sankey be great from the outside?

Sankey To Join Scorpions

Derek Sankey, high-scoring forward of the Vancouver Athletics, has been asked to play for Victoria Scorpions in the Western and Canadian senior "A" men's basketball playoffs.

"We are attempting to contact him," sponsor Ian Scott Moncrief said this morning. "If he will play for us, then we'll pick him up."

Sankey scored 76 points in the three games against the Scorpions in the B.C. playoffs which concluded Sunday with Scorpions winning the best-of-three series, two games to one.

Sankey also is a former national team player.

Scorpions will play Raymond Union Jacks, the Alberta representative team in a best-of-three western final at the old UVic gym starting Friday night at 8:30 p.m. If the Union Jacks win the series, they will qualify for the Canadian championship in Victoria, March 26-27-28, making it a five-team tournament. If Raymond loses to Scorpions, it will be a four-team final. In any event, Scorpions are in the finals.

Sankey was named most valuable player in the Dogwood League this season and was presented with his award at Sunday's game here. He was also named to the first all-star team along with Bob Burrows of Scorpions, Terry MacKay of Capilanos, Brent Watson of the A's and Gary Smith of Burnaby Bullets. Brian MacKenzie of Scorpions was selected to the second team and Dave Morgan of Scorpions received honorable mention. League scoring champion was Watson.

Meanwhile, at Winnipeg on the weekend, St. Andrews Super Saints qualified for the Canadian final with a second straight win over Saskatoon Senior Huskies, 111-65, to win the prairie playoffs.

Lampson Boys Take B.C., Island Laurels

Lampson Pacific Wing of Victoria has won both the British Columbia and Vancouver Island pre-midget boys' basketball championship.

Lampson topped the eight-team, two-in-one tournament at Royal Oak by defeating Victoria Chinese Students 31-19 in the final.

Duncan took third place by defeating Port Alberni 39-31 in the consolation final.

Chris Mosher of Lampson was named the most outstanding player in the tournament while Gord Simpson of Nanaimo, Daryn Lansdell of Lampson, Derek Chow of Glanford and Roddy Lee and Warren Mar, both of Chinese Students, were honored with first-team all-star berths.

Named to the second team were Tim Donald of Nanaimo, Dan Robertson of Lampson, Fulton Young and Brian Stiles of Duncan, and Glanford's Kirishan Manhas.

HOME LUMBER ADDS SHERRY FOR EXTRA PUNCH IN EAST

Sherry Stevenson, an 18-year-old forward with the University of Victoria Jayvees, has been added to the Victoria Home Lumber lineup and the trip to the Canadian senior "A" women's basketball final.

A graduate of Edmonton high school ranks, Sherry will join Gail Klaver and Sue Hoefer, both of Simon Fraser University, as additions to the British Columbia champions.

The Jack Lusk-coached team will leave Wednesday for Hamilton and the eight-team national tournament.

Home Lumber, bracketed in the "B" division along with Alberta, Manitoba and Newfoundland, will play Newfoundland in the opening round Thursday. The Victorians will play two games on Friday.

Quebec, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and Ontario make up the "A" division.

The top two teams after the round-robin preliminaries will advance to the semi-finals.

Other Victoria players travelling to Hamilton are Mary Coutts, Diana Morris, Angie Dobie, Lorraine Tutte, Dierdre Freethy, Karen Bigelow, Wendy Grant and Marilyn Benn.

LBC Seniors, Oak Bay Take Playoff Openers

League-champion London Boxing Club Seniors and Oak Bay followed different courses but both managed to come out on top of opening games in best-of-three Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League semi-final series Monday night at Royal Oak Junior High School.

Seniors outgunned London Boxing Club Juniors 47-26 in the second half en route to a 77-53 decision while Oak Bay was forced to rally and overcome a 36-27 half time deficit in order to top James Bay Athletic Association, 67-63.

Jim Mackay led Seniors with 15 points while Duff McCaghey and Dave Wirtanen added 14 points each.

Alf Hass also hit double figures with 11.

Thad Newman, Doug Calbeck and Ted Anderson each fired 11 points for Juniors.

Oak Bay and James Bay exchanged the lead several times late in the game before Oak Bay hit for the final three baskets and John Lauvaas scored the final two points from the free-throw line.

Tom Hatcher led Oak Bay with 23 points and Lauvaas added 18 while Mike Gains set the pace for James Bay with 16 points.

Seniors and Juniors play the second game of their series Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Cedar Hill Junior HIgh School. The series between Oak Bay and James Bay continues at 9 p.m. Thursday in Spectrum Community School.

Third games, if necessary, will be played next Monday.

OAK BAY (67): John Lauvaas 18, Tom Hatcher 23, Corky Jossul 15, Al Huddleston, Rick Humber 3, Del Christensen, Dan Wade, Mike Taaffe, 8, Don Horwood.

JAMES BAY (63): Harry Hunter 15, Mike Gains 16, Tony Anderson 14, John Campbell 4, Mike Morrill, Al Martyn 6, Dave Anderson 8.

'Best-of-Seven' Has New Meaning

Western Homes Buckaroos and London Boxing Club have added an extra dimension to what was scheduled to be a best-of-seven Big Six Hockey League playoff final.

The teams played to a 4-4 deadlock — the third tie of the series — Monday night at Memorial Arena.

Boxers lead the series 3-0 and the seventh game is scheduled for 8:25 p.m., Thursday at Pearkes Arena but the series won't end until one of the teams has collected four victories. Conceivably, there could be several games yet, or until the Boxers win another.

Dave Williams scored twice, including the tying goal, to set the pace for Boxers while single markers were added by Bob Martin and Ron Poole.

Bill Pettinger, Rick Piechotta, Neil Palone and Randy Krantz scored for Buckaroos, who trailed 2-1 after two periods of play.

Steve Kishkan made 30 saves in the Buckaroo net while Reg Wonnenberg of Boxers blocked 27 shots.

Bernie Nears Point Record

Centre Bernie Federko of Saskatoon Blades continues to close in on the Western Canada Hockey League scoring record.

Federko picked up 10 points in four games last week to increase his overall total to 163. He has 64 goals and a league-leading 99 assists.

He has eight games left in which to get six points and break the record of 168 points set by Bobby Clarke in 1967-68. Clarke, however, set his record in a 60-game schedule. Each team plays 72 games this season.

Federko has an 18-point margin over another centre, Greg Carroll of Medicine Hat Tigers. Carroll had a 30-game streak broken this week. But still managed to pick up seven points in two other games.

Victoria's top point-getter is centre Jim Gustafson. He managed only one point in Cougars' 4-0 victory over Kamloops Sunday and holds down eighth place with 119 points.

Cougars play their next game Wednesday, meeting the Regina Pats at Memorial Arena.

Scout Fund Drive Falters

NEW YORK (CP) — The National Hockey League so far has kept its cash register locked to the financially-troubled Kansas City Scouts, a second-year expansion team that needs $400,000 to finish the season.

NHL president Clarence Campbell told a news conference Monday that "we have a policy of no gifts, no loans and no co-signers." but he indicated that position might change if president Ed Thompson of the Scouts has acceptable collateral or guarantees that the league will get its money back.

Campbell said the Scouts asked the NHL for a loan to complete its schedule. The NHL's board of governors winds up its two-day meeting here today with a decision on Kansas City high on the agenda. The board could not resolve it Monday.

"These are difficult meetings," Campbell said wearily. "We have no finite decisions on about almost everything."

The governors and the finance committee reviewed Kansas City's worsening financial condition all day Monday.

"What's required is in the range of $400,000, and these are only estimates in which they (the Scouts) are prepared to put up a portion themselves . . . They would put up 25 per cent," Campbell said.

The league "may very well" grant the Scouts financial help but under a different set of conditions than unsecured loans, Campbell conceded.

"There may be some circumstances that would warrant doing so. They could come up with some collateral or guarantee. We're evaluating an offer of collateral."

Thompson has placed his losses this year alone at $1 million. As a last-place team in the Smythe Division with 14 games remaining this season, the Scouts have won only 12 games and barely have been able to half fill their 16,500-seat arena.

Handicap Limit Now 40, But Not for the Ladies

Most golfers have heard of the change, but if you haven't — and you happen to be one who objects to giving an opponent two strokes on par-three holes — be advised of some interesting possibilities on the course.

Low handicap players, in some cases, will start giving away three strokes on one hole.

Even more interesting is the possibility of a woman, a beginner to the game of golf, being forced to give strokes to a male opponent.

The possibilities exist because the Royal Canadian and United States Golf Associations have raised the handicap limit this year from 36 to 40 for all except Canadian women.

The Canadian Ladies' Golf Association runs its own show and, as far as is known, hasn't got around to conforming with the men's changes. As women's lib would have it, mother can start out with a handicap not to exceed 36 while poor old dad can claim a 40 handicap. In which case, the woman must give the man four strokes (providing there is no difference between men's and women's ratings).

Naturally, with the limit going to 40, any player with a handicap of three or less will find himself giving a limit-holding duffer three pops on the occasional hole.

There is more logic in another change concerning handicap regulations. As of the first of the year, the USGA has set its handicap base at 96 per cent of the lowest 10 of the last 20 scores. It conforms with the base the Canadians have used for the past three years.

★ ★ ★

That means, for the first time in many years, Canadians and American golfers may play each other on an equitable handicap basis. The change will be noticed when Victoria golfers head over to Seattle or Port Angeles (and vice versa) for annual inter-club meetings.

Now, and to all intents and purposes, the USGA and RCGA handicap systems are identical.

Both the RCGA and USGA have worked in close co-operation over the past few years to achieve the equity, but there remains a difference between the North American systems and the Council of National Golf Unions of Great Britain and Ireland.

The Irish and British are making strides towards improving their system.

The North American systems are precise, use all scores (including those made in stroke play), require review and regular revisions, and need only restricted arbitrary decisions by a handicap committee.

The British accept stroke-play scores only. Their handicappers have had broad latitudes to exercise judgment but, as of Jan. 1, the British have tightened their system.

The various golfing countries, however, do seem to be heading towards world-wide uniformity.

Victoria Skaters Win Seven Titles

FORT ST. JOHN — Brenda Shields and Brenda Dietiker led an impressive showing by members of the Esquimalt Speed Skating Club during the B.C. indoor championships here at the weekend.

Esquimalt members captured seven of the 14 class championships.

Miss Dietiker, who won the juvenile girls' crown, and Miss Shields, who collected the midget girls' laurels, each set two new provincial records. Miss Dietiker's marks were established in the 600 and 800 metres while Miss Shields set new standards in the 200 and 300 metres.

Martha Dietiker, who won the junior girls' title, also set a new record in the 600 metre event.

Other club winners of class championships were Debbie Dietiker (senior women's), Debbie Bourgois (intermediate women), David Shields (intermediate men) and Wilson Louie (midget boys).

Shawn Hobday (midget boys), Daryl Krupa (junior boys) and Rhonda Burton (senior women) were runners-up while Keith Robinson won a bronze medal in juvenile boys' competition.

A total of 106 skaters from the host city, Dawson Creek, Hudson Hope, Mission, Abbotsford, Vancouver, Red Deer and Esquimalt took part in the two-day event.

SOMERVILLE RINK BOWS

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — The Bruce Roberts rink of Hibbing, Minn., beat four-time champion Bud Somerville of Superior, Wis., 9-1 Saturday for the U.S. Men's Curling Association national championship.

The two squads were forced into a play-off after each posted 10-1 records in round robin competitions.

The champion advances to the world curling tournament March 22-28 at Duluth, Minn.

TOLLER CRANSTON
. . . reasons personal

Cranston Boycotts Ice Tour

GOTEBORG, Sweden (CP-AP) — Toller Cranston of Toronto has decided to boycott a European tour by the world's top figure skaters and several other western stars might follow his lead.

A score of the world's top skaters were to have taken part in the three-week tour sponsored by the International Skating Union.

Cranston, who finished fourth in the men's singles at the just-completed world champions here and won a bronze medal at the Olympics, has become a crowd favorite because of his brilliant free skating.

Charles Dover, manager of the Canadian team, announced Cranston's decision shortly before the tour's departure for Oslo Monday. He would not give the reason for Cranston's action, saying only that it was personal.

It is no secret, however, that Cranston is disillusioned with the championships' judging system which kept him out of the medals.

This goes for several other North American skaters who think their modern style is underrated by the judges compared with the style of skaters from the Soviet Union and that East European judges vote as a bloc.

The tour is not an obligation for the skaters, but they are expected to join it to help the federation sell tickets.

Listed for the tour starting today, going on to Western Europe and Britain in mid-March and then ending in Eastern Europe and Moscow at the end of the month, were all of the world champions and their cloest competitors.

There were seven Russians, including the pairs and ice dance world champions, as many East Germans, four United States skaters including women's champion Dorothy Hamill, men's champion John Curry of Britain and Dianne de Leeuw of The Netherlands.

Friends of Curry, however, indicated he would leave the tour after it performed in London on March 17, although British team manager John Weaver did not confirm this.

The U.S. skaters — Miss Hamill, Terry Kubicka and dancers Colleen O'Connor and James Millns — may also quit the tour before the East European section starts march 18, sources close to them said.

Miss Hammill said after winning the world championship she was tired training and competing in Europe since Jan. 24 and she wants to go home.

"Nothing can be said officially, but I doubt that Miss Hamill and others will complete the tour after London, even if the Russians are furious," one source said. "Dorothy can always fall sick.

"The Russians have done it many times."

Arbutus Rinks Win

Visiting rinks from Arbutus Club in Vancouver captured two of the four events in the annual women's Daffodil Bonspiel which ended Sunday at Victoria Curling Club.

Ruth Hebert skipped her Arbutus foursome to victory in the "A" event by beating Onilea Crothers' Playland rink in the final and Mary Williams of the saame Mainland club defeated June Randall of North Shore to take the "B" event.

Entries from the host club won the other two events.

Flora Martin's rink of Elsie Humphrey, Doreen Baker and Marie Swanton captured the "C" event by beating clubmate Phyl Bird while Ruby Neimeyer's quartet (Abby Adamowski, Faye Edl, Jo Farrar) collected the "D" event title with a decision over clubmate Laurel Eby.

Volleyball Tour By Cuban Team

OTTAWA — Cuba's national men's volleyball team will open a five-match Canadian tour at Vancouver on March 15.

Other matches for the Cubans, who are playing the Canadian national team in each city, are scheduled for Calgary, Edmonton, Regina and Winnipeg.

A new kind of car.

There's never been a Dodge like this before. Dodge Aspen has been designed with today's driving conditions in mind. Aspen is a compact . . . the compact for big-car drivers. That means we've gone to great lengths to make sure that Aspen delivers more room, comfort and luxury than any ordinary compact. To do it we had to come up with a new kind of car.

Big-car comfort.

One thing that big car drivers look for is comfort. And that means having lots of room to stretch out in. Aspen comes through with more legroom and headroom than most full-size North American cars. And to get at all that roominess, Aspen gives you extra-wide doors for easy entry and exit.

Aspen delivers big-car comfort in other ways, too. For instance, the interior trim is superb. And special attention has been paid to sound insulation. So your new Aspen will be big-car quiet.

Big-car ride.

Here's another way Dodge Aspen treats you to the comforts of big cars. We designed Aspen's suspension system to duplicate the feel, vibration isolation, noise reduction and smoothness of a full-size car. The fact that we succeeded is something you'll discover yourself when you take one for a test drive.

Big-car options.

Compact cars used to have a pretty compact option list. Not so with Aspen. Here's just a taste of what you can order to make your new Aspen yours alone:
• air conditioning • six-way power seats • power windows • power door locks • AM/FM Multiplex stereo radio with full four-speaker stereo sound • automatic speed control (with Torqueflite automatic) • sun roof (Sedans and Coupes) • electric heated rear window • tilt steering wheel (available with power steering and automatic transmission).
The list goes on and on. Our point is, if you want to personalize your new Aspen, you'll find the wide choice you've come to expect from a big car.

Big-car model choice.

There are three Aspen series. There's the standard Aspen, available as a 2-door Sport Coupe, 4-door Sedan and a 4-door Station Wagon.

Aspen Custom is available as a 2-door Coupe and 4-door Sedan. The very luxurious Aspen Special Edition lets you choose from 2-door Sport Coupe, 4-door Sedan and 4-door Station Wagon models.

While we're very proud of all our new Aspen models, we're even more pleased to point out that for the first time in Canada, Dodge is making two compact Station Wagon models available. It's just another reason we call Aspen the compact for big-car drivers.

Compact-car economy.

In looks, room, and ride, Aspen comes on big. But when it comes to economy, Aspen lives up to what you'd expect from a compact.

Two engines are available as standard—the famous 225 CID Slant Six or the economical 318 CID V8. Both know how to make the most of your gas dollar.

Reclining 60/40 bench seat with centre armrest standard on SE Coupes and Sedans, optional on SE Station Wagons.

New overdrive transmission.

Want to make your gas dollar go even farther? There's a new optional overdrive-4 transmission. Overdrive means that at highway speeds, your Aspen's engine won't have to work as hard (27% less engine speed) or burn as much gas to keep up with traffic. It's available on all models with the 225 CID Slant Six and 318 CID V8.

Aspen Special Edition 2-Door Coupe.

Aspen Special Edition Station Wagon.

All backed by the Chrysler Warranty.

Your new Dodge Aspen is backed with a 1-year, unlimited mileage warranty. In short, that means that if anything goes wrong during the first year, no matter how far you drive, it's our problem, not yours. (Police cars and taxis excepted.)

Productivity in B.C. Jumps by 10 Per Cent

VANCOUVER (CP) — The gross provincial product rose 10 per cent in British Columbia last year, in spite of a world recession and major work stoppages in the province, says a report by the B.C. economic development department.

The department's report also says the outlook for 1976 is generally favorable in most sectors.

Growth of personal income by 16 per cent was the major factor contributing to an anticipated 10-per-cent nominal growth of gross provincial product (GPP) to $18,357 million.

In constant dollars, the GPP is expected to be up fractionally — under one per cent — in contrast to a slight drop for the gross national product — two-tenths of one per cent.

Former premier David Barrett said today a summary of economic activity released by the department of economic development Friday vindicates what he has been saying all along: that the economy in the province under NDP was strong.

"It shows the government had an outstanding year last year in direct contrast to what the new premier has been telling the public," he said.

Barrett said the results of the summary have caught the Socreds "with their own figures down".

"It is shocking, absolutely shocking," he said.

Barrett said the summary proves that the figures given by the Clarkson and Gordon study, initiated by the Socreds, was not an audit but a report and, moreover, "a political document".

"Considering the province's heavy reliance on world markets which have been depressed, the economic performance of 1975 as been favorable, with improvements during 1976 expected as world economies continue to recover," the department said in its summry of economic activity for 1975, released Monday.

The report, a statistical summary with comment on various segments of the economy, is prepared annually by the economists within the department. It usually is published in late December or early January but was delayed by the Dec. 11 provincial election and subsequent change to a Social Credit government from a New Democratic Party government.

The number of jobs grew 29,000 or three per cent to 1,028,000 but this did not keep pace with the growth of the labor force, resulting in 94,000 unemployed or 8.5 per cent compared with six per cent in 1974. The rate of population growth moderated between June, 1974, and June, 1975, to 2.6 per cent from 3.5 per cent a year earlier.

The report said that the consumer price index was estimated to increase 10 to 11 per cent over 1974 while the wholesale price index was up only 7.7 per cent compared with 22 per cent in 1974.

International trade through B.C. customs ports in current dollars was slightly above the record level of 1974 but allowing for price increases would drop below 1974 in real terms, it added.

Exports in current dollars were estimated at $6.42 billion compared with $6.23 billion in 1974. Decreases in lumber, fish products, metals in ores, refined metals, oilseeds and grains were balanced by gains in the value of most other classes of exports — coal, natural gas and crude petroleum, the report said.

Imports, at an estimated $2.77 billion were below the $2.86 billion registered in 1974. The decline reflected reduced demand in western Canada for such products as iron and steel, equipment and tools and transportation and communication equipment.

The dollar value of manufacturing shipments rose slightly to $7.13 billion from $7.02 billion in 1974 but these reflect the difficulties faced by the forest industry in labor relations and in the marketplace.

Shipments of wood products were down to $1.5 billion from $1.8 billion a year earlier. Pulp and paper shipments were $1.4 billion in 1975 compared with $1.41 billion in 1974.

Public and private investment in construction and machinery and equipment was estimated at $5.7 billion, up nine per cent from 1974 but this increase largely reflects higher material and labor costs, said the report.

"Significant gains were recorded in certain sectors, however, with expenditures by utilities up 22 per cent and government and institutions up 21 per cent," said the report. "Expenditures in housing were down five per cent."

In 1975, the value of mineral production at $1.223 billion was above 1974 levels due primarily to increased prices and volume of coal. Copper productions and prices were both down sharply while other ores and concentrates showed significant improvements. natural gas and crude petroleum prices rose but production was down.

The report said performance in agriculture was mixed. Farm cash receipts rose two per cent to $373 million.

The fishing industry experienced "a very disappointing year" compared with 1974. The wholesale marketed value of fish products was estimated at $146 million compared with $220 million. The salmon catch was down for cyclical reasons and because of a labor dispute.

Canada Duped —Paper

HAMILTON (CP) — The federal government has been duped in a $1-billion deal with Lockheed Aircraft Corp. over the purchase of 18 long-range patrol aircraft, according to the Hamilton Spectator.

The paper adds: "A high-place source claims that Lockheed knew it would be unable to find the $200-million initial costs.

"The source told The Spectator that Lockheed should have known it would be unable to raise the money at the time the company was trying to beat a competing offer from Boeing Co. to supply the aircraft."

Progressive Conservative defence critic Allan McKinnon (Victoria) is quoted as predicting the contract will fall through.

He said he was stunned to learn that up to the proposed January signing that neither the Canadian government nor Lockheed knew who was going to provide the start-up money.

FIRE INSURANCE DENIED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan of British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Monday that a shipbuilding firm that was destroyed by fire was not entitled to insurance because it was operating in contravention of civic bylaws.

He dismissed an action by James Yachts Ltd, which sued under a policy of insurance for loss amounting to $100,000 as a result of a fire in its boatyard in North Vancouver June 1, 1972.

Defendants in the action were the Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Company Limited, Coast Underwriters Limited, Marine office Appleton and Cox (Continental Insurance Company and Canadian Marine Underwriters.

Mr. Justice Ruttan said in his judment that the district of North Vancouver had refused the boatbuilding firm a permit to occupy its premises until they had a guarantee that modifications would be carried out to comply with the building code.

Mr. Justice Ruttan said that the insurers were entitled to void the contract because of non-disclosure by the company regarding the right of use and occupation of the premises and the financial stability of the plaintiff company.

But he added that the plaintiff's behavior extended beyond mere non-disclosure and amounted to the operation of an unlawful business in carrying on boatbuilding when forbidden to do so under the bylaws and regulations of the municipality.

He said the company's carrying on business was in breach of an implied warranty of legality.

Here's the latest in the startling evolution of the T-shirt as displayed by these models. Once the regulation issue for sailors during the Second World War, the T-shirt has grown at a bewildering rate. Now it's body language, a collection that speaks for itself.

Mill Bay Man's Body Identified

Shawnigan Lake RCMP today identified a body found near shore in Saanich Inlet Saturday as that of Lloyd Robert Aune, 59, of Mill Bay.

Police said Aune was reported missing and presumed drowned Dec. 8 after his boat capsized about 50 feet offshore at Mill Bay.

The body was found by three scuba divers. Police said an autopsy and inquiry has been ordered by the coroner but no date has been set yet.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Rum-Swigger Turned Bright Blue, Keeled Over...Dead

. . . And, bringing up the rear, of course, the ever-present ship's cat.

"Fifteen men on the dead man's chest—
Yo-ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!
Drink and the devil had done for the rest—
Yo-ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

R. L. Stevenson's couplet and regret at the phasing out of the navy's rum tot were all part of the nostalgia on the weekend as liquor stores were bombarded with people trying to get their share of the last pusser's rum.

For one retired naval commander, at least, the nostalgia was nauseous.

Cmdr. A. G. (Lofty) Coning of 3152 Richmond says the day "somebody got some guts" and abolished the rum tot was one of the best things to happen to the Canadian navy.

"It was a nuisance to supply, difficult to distribute and even more difficult when the sailors got it in them," he said.

The rum tot was disastrous for at least two of the men Coning commanded.

"I had a coxswain, a chief petty officer who died from too much rum," Coning said, "He had a large part with the distributing of the tot. He just turned bright blue and keeled over."

The second casualty was a ship's butcher who was ordered to come up on deck and deal with a shark that had been caught.

"He came up half full of rum, took a swipe at the shark with his cleaver, missed, and both he and the cleaver went over the side," Coning recalled.

The story had a happy ending, however. The butcher let go his cleaver and stayed afloat long enough to be rescued.

Coning served his seatime with the Royal Navy but Canadian naval officers also had life complicated by "old demon rum."

In the early 1930s some enterprising stokers found themselves in deep trouble for stealing rum while on a cruise in the West Indies.

The theft was discovered after some of the ship's company complained that their rum rot had been watered too much. (A tot of rum was two ounces and had to be watered down with three parts of water to make the traditional grog.)

The thieves gave the game away, their tongues becoming loose after too much imbibing.

In those days stokers could volunteer for an extra 10 cents a day to become part of what was known as the double-bottom party. Their job was to paint with red lead the bottom part of the ship, which also included the area where the rum locker was kept for coolness.

All the time they worked in the area of the rum locker a guard was mounted to protect the ship's supply.

This didn't daunt the rum-robbing stokers.

They armed themselves with hypodermic needles which they stuck into the keg's side, sucking out rum and relacing it with water so that the theft could not be discovered, at least for some time.

Shipboard wakes were held when the rum tot came to an end in 1972. Now all messes are allowed to have their own bars, buying whatever type of liquor they want during certain hours, providing they are of legal age.

In fact, the beer and wine sailors can sip now is older in tradition than "Nelson's blood."

An RN captain, W.N. I. Beckett, in his book on naval customs, said that before the rum tot was instituted beer or wine was issued, the allowance being one pint for men and half a pint for boys.

But the beer "was weak and generally stinking", taking too much room to stow, Beckett said, so Admiral Robert Blake introduced brandy about 1650. Rum was substituted in March of 1687.

The British admiral Edward Vernon, concerned at the rowdyism caused by rum among his seamen, ordered the rum watered down in 1740.

The diluted rum was named grog after him because he had a habit of wearing grogram clothing and bore the nickname Old Grog.

TOWN TALK

One group of Canadians who will have no difficulties with the metric system are servicemen who have spent some time in Europe.

Master Corporal J. M. Tolley of Work Point Barracks, who drove in kilometers per hour while serving for seven years in Germany, writes that the recent Times series failed to mention the universal service slang term for driving.

It is Ks (pronounced Kays) and short for KPH.

He predicts Ks will become the general term across Canada when KPH is introduced here within two years.

"Another term sometimes used is Klicks, although not as often as Ks. It rolls off the tongue easily as in six Klicks, for example."

Abolishing capital punishment in lieu of 25 year minimum prison sentences makes good moral sense to many but not the other kinds of cents.

Based on the current cost of keeping a man in custody — $13,000 a year — and expecting a 10 per cent annual rate of inflation, the 25-year jail term will end up costing the taxpayers a total of $1,567,557.

The quality of mercy should carry no price tag but if it is to rain down upon our heads then surely something can be done to ease the burden — perhaps even make the prisoners engage in some productive work.

That much the taxpayers should be entitled to — at least, for mercy's sake.

Saanich's No. 3 firehall at 1900 McKenzie may not be the proverbial "thing of beauty and joy forever" but it's distinctive and attractive enough to rate a four-page spread in the February issue of Architectural Record of San Francisco, one of the two top North American architectural magazines.

Co-editor Janet Nairn particularly stresses the unusual 45-foot training tower. Designed by the Victoria firm of Orme and Levinson Architects, Miss Nairn says the firehall is unique. She's in a position to know. Her boyfriend is a San Francisco fireman.

The E and N Railway passenger diesel may not be the most attractive way to travel up-Island, but the trackside facilities look pretty good to movie-makers.

Their aura of decadence had just the right appeal to some eastern film directors not too long ago, and they got permission to transplant a little bit of rural Ontario to one of the tiny stations near Duncan.

A sign bearing the name of an Ontario hamlet was put up, but the Dayliner crew was not told before the train pulled in.

As Cowichan Valley Regional District building inspector Carl Leeman described it to Canadian Transport Commission Monday, "The engineer jumped out and asked the station master where he was."

Neighborhood Watch in Oak Bay? You bet there is!

Seems not long ago she got notice from another highrise inhabitant that the lights disturbed the dear old soul — who kept her blinds open at night to be wakened by the morning sun.

Nothing strange about that — except the early bird lives in a building a block-and-a-half away.

13 Pounds Of Pot Seized

John Christopher Howard, 26, of 3463 Seymour Avenue, pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court today to possession of about 13 pounds of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

He was remanded in custody to March 23 for sentence.

The charge followed a police raid on the Seymour home Monday afternoon, in which three people were arrested. The same charge against the other two persons was withdrawn in court.

Police said the street value of the marijuana was about $5,500.

In a separate case before Judge William Ostler this morning, Victoria-area resident David Ernest Milliken, 20, pleaded guilty to a charge of trafficking in marijuana early today, when he sold one ounce for $20 to a policeman in the 800-block Fisgard.

He was remanded to March 25 for sentence and released on his own recognizance in the sum of $500.

Stop NIP Squabbling, Fernwood Area Told

Unless residents of the Fernwood area can stop squabbling and democratically agree on proposals for their Neighborhood Improvement Program they could end up having little or no say in how NIP funds are spent, says Ald. Murray Glazier.

Glazier, chairman of the city's housing and NIP committee, said he would be reluctant to see that happen but there might be no alternative if the recent record of stormy, bickering meetings within the community isn't improved.

There have been allegations of undue pressure and intimidation tactics by one neighborhood group in efforts to have its own ideas adopted.

Glazier didn't name any names but he said a lot of people are "rightly distressed at the way this is going."

"Hopefully they can put their own house in order," he added. "But if not we (city council) will have to take a stronger role. The alternative would be for City Hall to take a much stronger position and tell the community groups what we think they should have in their program."

He said the city had tried to ensure that proposals for spending $1 million of NIP funds were worked out as democratically as possible.

As in James Bay and Victoria West, strong community participation was invited and a committee was formed with representatives from 32 areas within the Fernwood-Gladstone-Spring Ridge district.

"We relied on the process of the community turning out and appointing people," Glazier explained. "We have ended up with 32 people but unfortunately there are certainly a lot of people who I recognize are not representative of the community and have very little to contribute."

He said these were mainly younger people whom he described as the "legacy" of sundry Cool-Aid, Local Initiatives and similar programs that were formerly active in Fernwood.

"The people that came up through these programs and got interested in neighborhood and social affairs by and large have been stripped of their former role and maybe the only game in town is NIP, so they have switched over."

The alderman said he has laid down firm principles, including the stipulation that anyone involved in the NIP exercise has to be so in a strictly voluntary capacity; no one is to be paid for his or her services.

One group wants the Fernwood Community Associations to become the vehicle for the NIP project on a non-profit basis, but Glazier said he isn't prepared to recommend that.

"Council wants the NIP committee to be on its own and relate directly to the city," he said.

'Right' Tactics Saved Building

City firemen "hit the right place at the right time" on Monday and saved a downtown city block from destruction.

About $15,000 damage was done to the three-storey Duck Block at 1318 Broad. Firemen had the flames under control in 15 minuutes and there were no injuries.

The fire began in a storage area of the second-floor Brown Jug cabaret and 18 city firemen were on the scene at 1 p.m.

Oak Bay and Saanich fire departments were on standby but were not needed.

"We hit the right place at the right time," deputy fire chief Carl Coates said today. "Had it spread upwards and horizontally as it may well have done the whole block would have been involved."

The blaze worked down from the cabaret storage area to the office of the Marble Machine arcade below and out through a side wall.

That put the flames in the stairwell of the 20-suite Broadlane Apartments at 1322 Broad. The residents were evacuated. The cabaret, Marble Machine and third-floor Eversfield Theatrical Arts Studio were vacant at the time.

There was some water damage in the ground-floor Old British Fish and Chips. The worst structural damage was in the cabaret, arcade office and studio.

Dayliner Passengers Fall 60% Short Of Break-Even Line

Passenger loads on the E and N Dayliner's fall 60 per cent short of break-even, railway commissioners were told today, the second day of a Canadian Transport Commission hearing.

See also page 34.

The hearing is on an application by CP Rail to abandon its passenger service from Victoria to Courtenay and the line north of Parksville to Courtenay.

Giving evidence for CP Rail Pacific Region superintendent of passenger services Donald S. Collings said the Dayliner needs 77.4 per cent passenger load to make it break even and in 1974, the last year figures were available, it operated at 17.4 per cent load factor.

He gave the information as a supplement to previous testimony given during a hearing at Courtenay last week. He said a previous figure of $309,100 as the cost of operation had been disallowed and had been reduced to $298,795, producing a new figure of 5.11 cents as the cost per seat mile of operation. This also produced a figure of 6.6 cents revenue per passenger mile.

Counsel for the company, Norman D. Mullins, asked about previous testimony in which it was said that stations had been locked on Saturdays. Collings said arrangements had now been made for keeping them open.

At Chemainus, he said, the gas station operator will be responsible for the station, at Ladysmith, a Crown Zellerback watchman will open the station Saturdays and at Duncan, Saturday opening is also contracted out during train hours.

Counsel Lawrence R. Fast, representing the Cowichan Valley Regional District, requested the Canadian Pacific evidence be resubmitted to allow cross-examination but Mullins objected, saying the company's responsibility is to the commission, not to the people of Victoria.

Melvin Smith, counsel for the B.C. government, said he thought the people of Victoria are entitled to hear the case and ought not to have to go to Courtenay to hear it.

After a recess, counsel agreed to outline the evidence already presented at Courtenay.

The provincial government expects to take at least a day presenting its argument opposing CP Rail's application.

GUN VICTIM 'FAIR'

Former Victoria resident Dennis Fea, victim of a shooting in Vancouver on Friday, is in fair condition in Vancouver General Hospital.

Fea, 37, was operated on Friday after being shot with a high-powered rifle. The bullet ripped through his arm, struck the left side of his rib cage and splintered into his lung and spleen.

Fea, district manager of Facit-Addo Ltd. in Vancouver, and another employee were shot by a gunman who burst into the company's office Friday morning. The other person was killed.

Guy Jean Barnier, 36, has been charged with murder and attempted murder.

Fea, Victoria-born, graduated from Esquimalt senior secondary in 1955.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fea reside at 522 Fraser.

Put It in Writing, Kids

NEW YORK (NYT) — Many parents find it more natural to hand seven-year-olds a pencil for creative drawing than to hand it to them for creative writing, perhaps because children appear to have so little control over words.

Yet, they do have something to say. And among people who care about the written word there are those who would like to see every young child writing from the heart about secrets, fantasies, fears, happinesses; about arms, legs, noses — to make writing a part of themselves before it becomes some arcane talent to be admired in others, or pursued in adult education courses.

One of those who is trying to get children to write early is Sandra Hockman, the poet and novelist — her latest novel is "Happiness Is Too Much Trouble" — who started writing poetry when she was a lonely second-grader in a Darien, Conn., boarding school, and believes she became a poet then.

As a teacher of poetry, it took her some time to arrive at working with young children. She has taught college students at Fordham University, high school students at the Dalton School and now, at the Hewitt School, has reached seven-year-olds at last.

In the class that she visits every week, she gives the appearance of the mother-teacher. She shouts at the children when they are noisy ("Quiet, please!") because she thinks that when poets read, they deserve to be heard. And she whispers encouragement when a child who wants to recite from memory has a lapse.

"Now take a deep breath," Miss Hochman says gently, "and start over."

Like an adoring parent, she rates all the poems on a "scale of good." She said, "There's good, fabulous and incredible; when they're this age, criticism doesn't make any sense."

Miss Hochman said she doesn't think there is any one method for teaching poetry. Nevertheless, she does have her own approach. An important element is to teach a child to deal with the individual parts of an experience — a particular sensation, a place, a coat-hanger — not, "I had a very nice summer and I feel fine."

To that end she assigns specific, often intentionally mundane, subjects (feet, for instance) about which the children can write anything in any style and at any level of competence.

Amy Burkhart came to class the other day with the assignment on feet completed: "Socks are smelly, shoes are worse, if you call me, I'll plug my nose first."

Miss Hochman laughed and was thrilled, helping Amy get accustomed to the adulation of fans. Meanwhile, one of the children helped Amy get accustomed to critical adversity.

"I don't get it," said a little voice in the corner.

COLLECTOR'S CORNER BY TOM BATESON

INDOOR GARDENS

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL:

I just love piggyback plants, but I have absolutely no luck at all. I've had three, and each one has done very well for a few weeks, and then suddenly, they completely droop and die — usually within hours and without any warning whatsoever. I hate to throw them out, But I don't know what else to do. What is the cause of this drooping, and is there anything I can do to prevent it? — J.M.

DEAR J.M.:

One of the most common complaints we hear about piggybacks is ther habit of drooping and appearing to be dead. Notice, we said APPEARING to be dead. Provided you've got a healthy, disease-free plant and are keeping it in food, indirect light, the only reason it will wilt is lack of sufficient water. It's amazing, but if you take a droopy piggyback outside in the shade, water it thoroughly and then wait a few hours, it'll pop back up good as new. It can't take too many reincarnations, however, so keep the soil damp and it won't happen in the first place. Try once more—piggybacks ARE beautiful and not that difficult to maintain.

dear abby

Hospital Leaks

DEAR ABBY: What protection does a hospital patient have from nosy hospital personnel who divulge a patient's confidential information to their friends?

I live next door to a gossip monger whose sister-in-law has access to medical records at a local hospital.

Recently I was a surgical patient there, and I purposely did not disclose the nature of my surgery to anyone excepting my immediate family. This neighbor admitted learning the specific details of my case from her sister-in-law, whom I've never even met. When I told this neighbor that I resented the invasion of privacy, and that medical case histories were supposed to be confidential, she ridiculed me for being so "secretive."

How does a person deal with such an obvious invasion of privacy? Or has this become so commonplace that it is now legal and socially acceptable?—INFURIATED

DEAR INFURIATED: I hope that publication of this letter will cause hospital administrators to impress upon their employees and volunteers that all patients have a right to privacy, and violation of confidentialities should be grounds for immediate dismissal!

DEAR ABBY: Out of the blue, for no reason whatsoever, my husband decided to destroy all of our credit cards! He could just as easily have put them away to be used only in case of emergency, such as unexpected expenses.

I work just as my husband does, and I pay my share of the bills, so I think I should have had a say in this matter. But he just made up his mind and destroyed all our credit cards.

What should I do?—UPSET IN TEXAS.

DEAR UPSET: Since you are employed, you can have credit cards issued in your name! The Equal Opportunity Act (passed in October 1975) gives you that right.

DEAR ABBY: How can I get my 15-year-old son to respect me? His daddy has taught him to cut me down. (My son has been taught by my husband that Daddy never makes a mistake or never does anything wrong. But he sits on his bucket and never lifts a finger to help me with the housework even though I am crippled with rheumatoid arthritis.)

My doctor refuses to get involved in family affairs. When I asked him to please say a few words to my husband for my health's sake, he said, "I am a physician, not a referee."

Our preacher is very young and says that he's had no training in marriage counseling so he can't help me. Besides, he won't even talk to people who do not tithe, and my husband is one of them.

Don't send us on a goose chase for counseling. This bull-headed husband of mine refuses to talk to anybody about his personal affairs. All he wants to do is yell at me.

Please help me because my son is getting to be just like his daddy. Divorce is out. He's got his good points.—NERVOUS WRECK

DEAR WRECK: Sorry, but counseling is my recommendation. And if you can't get your husband to go, go alone. You need to learn how to cope with a bull-headed husband.

Feeding of Babies Linked to Obesity

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An increasing amount of data suggests a relationship between obesity in babies and changing feeding patterns — premature feeding of solid foods and a decline in breast-feeding, according to Dr. Donald Hill, a Toronto child-care specialist.

With such changes in feeding, "we're seeing a rather alarming number of babies that are significantly obese by the age of one year," Dr. Hill said in a speech to a conference on child growth and development.

He said it is unclear whether such babies remain obese as children and adolescents, but there is evidence suggesting that many do.

Dr. Hill said mothers who bottle-feed their babies tend to overfeed them. Some mothers, if told to give babies a particular amount of milk at a particular time, will follow the instructions even if the babies do not want the milk, he said.

By Dr. WILLIAM WELCH

(Dr. Welch is a practicing physician and an Associate Professor of Clinical Medicine.)

Most of us are aware that there is enough caffeine in a cup of coffee or a glass of tea to get us going in the morning and pick us up in the afternoon. But even doctors seem to have forgotten that overdosing ourselves with coffee or tea may bring on symptoms indistinguishable from a true anxiety neurosis.

Three such cases were reported in 1974 from the Walter Reed Army Medical Centre by Dr. John F. Greden, former director of psychiatric research. They included a nurse who had been drinking 12 cups of coffee a day, a colonel who drank 8 to 14 cups daily, plus cola drinks and cocoa, and a sergeant who was also a heavy drinker of coffee, tea and cola.

They all complained of nervousness, difficulty in sleeping at night, restlessness, recurring headaches and agitation. Until their caffeine intake was recognized as the underlying problem, they had been diagnosed as suffering from severe anxiety neurosis.

Improvement in the symptoms of such patients when the coffee intake is reduced or decaffeinated coffee is substituted verifies the diagnosis at the same time that it clears up the complaints.

Caffeinism is a problem among adults whose coffee breaks last all day long, but it can also turn up among cola-slurping youngsters.

Cola drinks to which caffeine has been added represent an estimated two-thirds of the nearly six billion gallons of soda pop consumed each year in the United States and thus constitute a major source of caffeine intake among adolescents. This is augmented by the caffeine contained in cocoa, hot chocolate and chocolate bars.

Pediatricians have reported nervousness, headaches and irritability in young patients, which in some has been found to be related to caffeinism brought on by the immoderate guzzling of cola drinks, too much cocoa and too many chocolate bars.

At a moment in our history, when the misuse and abuse of drugs, meant as a cure for psychological upset, tends to dominate our thinking, it is important to be reminded that excessive caffeine intake is a common, everyday cause of trouble — often overlooked.

At the same time, we must remember that we are talking about immoderate abuse, not sensible use.

Some people find that coffee at dinner will interfere with their sleep. Others complain of palpitation of the heart or indigestion. Each year, two and one-half billion pounds of coffee are consumed in the United States and close to 10 billion pounds the world over.

When taken in moderation by those who are not sensitive to its adverse effects, it has not yet been found to be a definite hazard to health. In spite of flurries of highly publicized research saying that coffee causes this or that, there is no general agreement among the experts that coffee lovers are drug addicts. They are NOT advised to give up coffee and tea along with their cigarettes, butter balls and alcohol.

Forget the Machines

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (NYT) — "Machines have no business in education," said the woodshop teacher at the Hill School here, studying a small assortment of aging machines. "If I had my way, I'd throw these out."

These were surprising words for a woodshop teacher, who might be expected to be seeking additional machines — newer and larger ones.

The teacher, Samuel Bush, stood in his spacious shop, situated on the first floor of a brick tudor building overlooking Pottstown.

"I want the students to do it by hand," he said. "I want them to struggle."

Tasks the Hill students do by hand include carving dovetails to join corners (using an electric router would be much easier), intricate carving (one student is making a banjo) and elaborate wood inlay work called marquetry. The students do their own signs.

Finished projects in the shop include a backgammon set inlaid with rosewood, mahogany, burled walnut, ebony and blond maple; a Queen Anne tea table with a rosewood top and Cabriole legs; a table desk with inlay top, made from walnut found on the students' farm, and four walnut Chinese chairs.

Teacher Bush thumped a five-drawer walnut chest with unusual molding that a student, Steve DeVine, had designed and planed. He made it by hand with tools that Bush and the metal shop had made for him.

"Look at that; it's good for 200 years," the 26-year-old teacher said.

He said that shop was not a required course at this 125-year-old, all-male preparatory school, but that a growing number of the 430 students were involved in shop projects. The shop is open seven days a week.

"There has been a rapid increase in eagerness in participation that is really staggering," Bush said.

"Kids at this age are totally idealistic; their natural desires are the best indicators of the times. I imbue them with the feeling that men can do things without machines. We give them something hard, the harder the better — and there is no easy way. When they finish, they know much more about themselves."

Bush, who is a graduate of the Hill School and Reed College in Portland, Ore., has directed the woodshop five years. He teaches two one-credit courses, Studio Wood One and Two.

Members of Studio Wood Two bent over their projects one recent afternoon. The only sounds were of hand sawing and sanding.

Stuart Bell, a senior from Larchmont, N.Y., was carving a sun on walnut that will be a top for a dovetailed box he made. It was his third attempt at the carving, but he wasn't discouraged.

"You get a lot out of carving," he explained. "You learn to work certain tools. You've got to concentrate — it's a good experience all the way around.

"When I have a lot of studying to do, I stop in here for a little while. It helps me relax and eases tension."

Just 14 Months But an Old Salt

Canadian Press

Jennifer Adams is a 14-month-old baby who roams the deck of a 25-foot wooden folk boat cleated to the safey of the rigging. The British Columbia water-baby, who has seen more ocean than many an old salt, is part of the growing number of Canadians who have decided to get away from it all.

Many of them are doing it by boat, and last month four Canadian boats were anchored in a small harbor in Southern France.

Jennifer and her parents Shaun and Joy Adams, met Hugh and Michka O'Mahoney from Prince Rupert; Linda and Bent Iverson from Windsor, Ont., and Fiona McCall and Paul Howard from Toronto. All are living on approximately $2,000 to $3,000 a year and are travelling "as long as the money lasts."

The Admas family feels it has only started its travels. Last June the Adams took a week's sailing lessons and five weeks later were in England looking for a boat. By mid-Aughst they were sailing "Wombat" to the Channel Islands, down the Bay of Biscay and through the French Canal to the Mediterranean.

For Jennifer the boat is her home and her toy. Despite every precaution she has fallen overboard three times.

"Of course, she always has a safety harness on," says Shaun. "Now she just holds her breath until she's hauled back on board."

The Adams plan to head for Australia and across the Pacific back to Vancouver.

In the case of Hugh and Michka, they left British Columbia four years ago aboard the "Nomad of Prince Rupert" — an unfinished 44-foot home-built boat — and travelled down the Pacific Coast, through the Panama Canal and the Caribbean and across the Atlantic to the Azores. From there, they went to England, down the Canal du Centre in France and reached the Mediterranean in November, 1974. Now they are ready to return to B.C., and the Nomad is up for sale.

Bent and Linda Iverson of Windsor have a different sort of family aboard the folkboat Sheila Mary. They invited Linda's sister, Tricia Lore, and Eric Noevere of Toronto to join them.

The foursome has travelled over 1,000 miles so far on $6 a day, a budget which includes a bottle of French wine with dinner every night.

Sailing the oldest boat are Fiona McCail and Paul Howard. Their classic gaff-cutter "Seagull' is 72 years old. A lot of time was spent workong on the boat in England. In August, 1975, they set sail for Holland where they were caught in a Dutch barge strike. A fast dash to Belgium and they were caught in Belgian barge strikes. When their boat got through two major blockades to Ghent, it merited headline news: "Canadians Break Blockade." After a leisurely trip through France they reached the Mediterranean.

FOR SALE sign in French hangs from stern of Nomad of Prince Rupert (top photo) as Hugh and Michka O'Mahoney plan to leave Marseille for B.C. and to homestead near Grand Forks. Jennifer Adams, 14 months (bottom photo), is attached to rigging by safety harness as she and her mother, Joy, watch Shaun Adams prepare supper in Marseilles harbor.

Was Earth Shield Weakened One Million Years Ago?

NEW YORK (NYT) — A team of atmospheric scientists has concluded that a series of events almost a million years ago may possibly have weakened the earth's ozone shield, permitting excessive ultra-violet radiation to reach the earth and cause the extinction of several species of tiny marine animals.

The discovery of such a possibility, they believe, may have relevance to recently raised questions about the vulnerability of the ozone layer that shields the earth from the extreme effects of the sun's ultra-violet rays.

The researchers arrived at their conclusions after a study of recorded atmospheric volved the following sequence occurrences. Their study inevents that had not been previously looked at as related of events:

—About 700,000 years ago the earth's magnetic field reversed its polarity, weakening the magnetic forces that shield the earth and its atmosphere from a substantial portion of solar and cosmic radiation.

—The resultant heavy bombardment of solar rays, possibly coupled with the occurrence of solar flares, caused excessive amounts of nitric oxide to form in the high atmosphere. The nitric oxide, in a well-known catalytic reaction, in turn destroyed part of the ozone shield above the earth.

—Thus weakened, the ozoned layer admitted the strong ultra-violet rays of the sun into the earth's garden of life. Such rays in excessive amounts are known to be capable of killing some species of plant and animal life.

—From examination of earth core samples, the researchers found that several species of microscopic sea animals susceptible to ultra-violet radiation had become extinct during the time of the reversal of the earth's magnetic polarity.

Earth scientists have estimated that at its present rate of decay, the earth's geomagnetic field with its polar centres at the North and South Poles will not reverse itself again until sometime between the 40th and 50th centuries. Such reversals, which occur for as yet unknown reasons, are believed to have occurred at irregular intervals of from a few to several hundreds of thousands of years.

The research team calculated that if solar flares comparable to those of August, 1972, that disrupted radio and television reception, were to occur during another geomagnetic reversal, enough nitric oxide would be produced to reduce stratospheric ozone by nearly 10 per cent.

They estimated that under such conditions the ground-level ultra-violet dosage would be increased by 15 per cent.

The researchers who wrote the report are Drs. George Reid and I. S. A. Isaksen of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and Thomas Holzer and Paul Cruzen of the National Centre for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo.

Their findings and conclusions, published in the Jan. 22 issue of the British scientific journal Nature, could possibly have some application in estimating present-day biological effects of an eroded ozone shield and resulting radiation increases, the scientists said.

JELLY SHOWED SIGNS OF LIFE

NEW YORK (CP) — An Ontario neurologist implanted 23 electrodes in a mold of jelly prepared by his wife, attached them to a brainwave recording machine and obtained readings giving varying evidence of electrical "life."

Dr. Adrian Upton, associate professor of medicine (neurology) at McMaster University in Hamilton, said he performed the experiment to demonstrate the extreme difficulty in obtaining a flat electroencephalogram, or EEG, even in the presence of brain death.

A flat EEG is considered evidence of brain death.

He attributed the response from the blob of jelly to electrical signals generated by respirators, other equipment and human activity in the intensive care unit in which the experiment was conducted.

Dr. Upton said similar electrical interference could mislead doctors into believing a patient's brain was still living when it might be lifeless.

He showed a videotape of the experiment at a medical meeting in San Francisco and the details and a reproduction of the EEG readout were published in the March 3 issue of Medical Tribune, a weekly newspaper distributed to physicians.

Dr. Upton said he performed the experiment as a teaching aid.

During the experiment, he also attached leads to a respirator and received a convincing respiration pattern.

"It's extremely difficult to get a flag EEG, even in the presence of brain death, because of artifacts," he reported.

"There are hundreds of these artifacts—tongue movements, sweat, microreflexes, I.V. drips, respirators, people walking around in the ICU (intensive care unit), paging systems, various monitors—and a good technologist is well aware of them.

"This videotape is meant to underscore the fact that one must be obsessionally careful to eliminate them."

Patty an SLA 'Queen,' Says Criminal Expert

Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst's kidnappers treated her as "queen" of the Symbionese Liberation Army because of the media attention she brought them, says a criminologist testifying at her bank robbery trial.

Dr. Joel Fort of San Francisco said the newspaper heiress joined the SLA within a month of her abduction and willingly participated in the holdup because she was ripe for conversion to an exciting new lifestyle.

"Something was missing in her life," he said.

Fort said Miss Hearst was bored and dissatisfied and felt her life lacked a sense of meaning. As a result, he said, she was impressed by the willingness of SLA members to die for their beliefs.

He depicted Miss Hearst as a rebellious teen-ager who took drugs, disliked her parents, engaged in sex at 15, fought with teachers, was bored with her fiance and lied to get out of tight spots.

Fort faced a stormy cross-examination today from defence attorney F. Lee Bailey, who shouted accusations at him during preliminary questioning last week.

Fort was asked by prosecutor James Browning Jr. if Miss Hearst was, as the defence claims, "the only soldier in an army of generals"?

"No, I think she was a queen," he said.

Explaining that remark, Fort said he believed both Miss Hearst and her kidnappers became so excited at the impact they were making in the news media throughout the world that she became a key figure in their group.

Fort, a criminologist and physician who has testified in 270 criminal cases, rejected three defence psychiatrists' analysis that Miss Hearst suffered a "traumatic neurosis" because of her treatment by the kidnappers and joined them in the April 15, 1974, robbery because of "coercive persuasion."

Fort took issue with several key elements in Miss Hearst's story.

Fort, his opinions based on four jailhouse interviews with Miss Hearst as well as other material, said the defendant was "a voluntary member of the SLA" when she and four comrades robbed a branch of the Hibernia Bank April 15, 1974.

Father Sought In Deaths

WASHINGTON (WP) — The beaten and partially burned bodies of the three sons, wife and mother of a missing U.S. State Department official from Bethesda, Md., were found a week ago in a shallow, fiery grave in a North Carolina swamp.

The five victims were identified Monday as members of the family of Bradford Bishop Jr., 39. Police said the pajama-clad bodies of sons Brad, 14, Brent, 10, and Jeffrey, 4, were found beneath their fully-clothed mother, Annette, 38, and paternal grandmother, Lobelia Bishop, 60.

The bodies were found last Tuesday after a forest ranger spotted a brush fire from a fire tower in rural Tyrrel County, N.C., about 75 miles south of Norfolk, Va. The fire turned out to be the burning grave, set on fire with gasoline, according to authorities.

"We are convinced beyond doubt the murders occurred in Maryland and not in North Carolina," said North Carolina Attorney-General Rufus Edmisten.

Three witnesses reported seeing a man driving a 1974 Chevrolet station wagon bearing Maryland tags near the gravesite about 10 a.m., Tuesday, March 2, according to Edmisten. The fire was reported three hours later.

Police in Montgomery County, Maryland, said Monday night they were listing the father as a 'missing person," pending further investigation. Bishop is assistant chief of the special trade activities office of the State Department's economic and business section.

Edmisten, however, said Bishop "is being sought for questioning," but he conceded Bishop also could be "lying dead somewhere."

Faith Training Lack Shocks RCs

WASHINGTON (WP) — The number of Roman Catholic school children who receive no formal religious instruction of any kind has more than doubled in the last 10 years, according to a study just released by the U.S. Catholic Conference here.

Elementary and secondary age youngsters who receive no formal training in their faith totalled 3.1 million in 1965 and 6.6 million in 1974, the study found.

The study showed that in 1974, only 8.6 million youngsters — 56.5 per cent of all Catholic children in this age group, received formal religious instruction either in parochial schools or in out-of-school classes conducted by their church.

A second study is planned to try to pinpoint the reasons for the decline, which Msgr. Wilfrid H. Paradis, co-author of the statistical study, conceded was "a shock" to church officials.

Msgr. Paradis, an official of the U.S. Catholic hierarchy's Department of Education, speculated that the sharp decline in religious education was "a symptom" of other developments and changes that have shaken the church since the Second Vatican Council more than a decade ago.

The report noted that the statistics showing 6.6 million uninstructed youngsters "are very likely the most optimistic possible and probably minimize the true dimensions of the problem."

Pair Placed on Probation

Suspended sentences and probation were given two persons last week by Judge Montague Drake in county court.

Victoria area resident Joseph Posavec, 33, was found guilty by Drake Feb. 6 of setting fire to his room at the Windsor hotel, 606 Courtney, July 18, 1975.

The judge said the circumstances were bizarre and out of character and unlikely to occur again. He described Posavec's act as an "aberration rather than malice."

Wendy Whiteway, 28, of Witty's Lagoon Road, pleaded guilty Feb. 6 to possession of housebreaking tools and breaking and entering at the Medical Professional Building, 1139 Yates, May 18 ,1975.

Court was told she has changed her lifestyle and ended her addiction to cocaine and heroin. The judge said he was satisfied the "drug business has come to an end" but he made a condition of her probation that she refrain from using drugs or associating with drug users.

Four on Trial For Conspiracy

TORONTO (CP) — Four men were committed Monday to trial on charges of conspiring to possess $300,000 illegally.

Vic Cotroni, 64, of Montreal, Johnny Papalia, 51, of Hamilton, Paulo Violi, 43, of Montreal, and Sheldon Sqartz, 38 of Toronto, were arrested last November.

Police said two Toronto stock promoters were alleged to have been threatened unless $300,000 was paid.

It Was Just Too Great a Temptation . . .

LONDON — Connecticut armored car driver Noel Richard stole $287,000 and flew to London. But somehwere over the Atlantic he had a change of heart. The first thing he did at the airport was to walk up to Customs officials and confess. Guarding huge amounts of money all day had finally become too much of a temptation, he said. Authorities detained him until two U.S. marshals could fly here to escort him home to face larceny charges.

OTTAWA — John Diefenbaker is ill at home qith the flu, and aide said Monday night. "It's nothing that could be considered serious," the aide said. The 80-year-old MP for Prince Albert was forced to cancel a speech Monday night at Regina at the Canadian men's curling championship and several other engagements in the city.

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — When Doug Smith carelessly ripped apart the department of motor vehicles form before reading the bold face instructions, "do not detach," he wanted to say he was sorry. "A sense of concern inherited from my parents caused me to include a brief handwritten apology for the mistake," Smith wrote in a letter to the editor of a local newspaper. "Today I received this handwritten note in my return package from DMV: " 'Dear Doug Smith: Thanks for the lovely note. Thoughtfulness is a diminishing resource in these parts." The letter was signed, clerk No. 3274981QRZNPA.

WASHINGTON — Comptroller of the U.S. currency James Smith, described by one senator as "King Farouk of the Potomac" and under fire for too much high living at taxpayer expense, has agreed to repay nearly $3,000 for limousine costs on business trips. Smith has signed and is planning to pay a promisory note for $2,941.74, with a 7½ per cent interest rate, when he leaves office in mid-1978, an aide said Monday. Smith said he will make the limousine reparation because "I'm tired of all those allegations," although he said he has no legal obligation to pay the money back.

MOSCOW — Dr. Grigory Podyapolsky, one of the Soviet Union's most prominent dissidents, died Monday after a brain hemorrhage, Andrei Sakharov, Nobel Peace prize laureate, said today. Sakharov told Western reporters Podyapolsky, a geophysicist, was travelling by train with his wife to Kaluga, south of Moscow, when he collapsed. he was taken to a hospital, but died after a second hemorrhage. The death of Podyapolsky, 48, "is a bitter blow to the human rights movement in the Soviet Union," Sakharov said.

MONTREAL — John Turner, former federal finance minister, was appointed a director of Canadian Pacific Ltd. at a meeting of the board of directors Monday, the company announced. Turner, who resigned as finance minister last year and later vacated his seat in the House of Commons, is a partner in the Toronto law firm of McMillan Binch.

LETHBRIDGE — A 24-year-old instructor fired last week by Lethbridge Community College for living with a 17-year-old female student says he will appeal his suspension. "To be specific, the board finds it intolerable that you should be living in a common-law relationship with a 17-year-old student at this institution," said the notice of suspension given instructor Ken Jaremco last week. Jaremco and student Lou Chesney said their private life does not damage Jaremco's teaching.

VANCOUVER — It wasn't the most glamorous way of travelling from one's wedding to one's reception, but it was practical. The entire party attending the wedding of James Whelan and Cheryl Ketilson hopped aboard a regular British Columbia Hydro bus after the ceremony, deposited their 25 cents fare, and took a short ride to the reception. Most of the wedding party had been unable to afford the increased auto insurance rates.

Crying For Happy . . .

. . . a tear and a crumpled smile are the first responses of Windsor's Shelly Homick, 16, on being named Miss Teen Canada in Toronto Monday night. It's hard to tell if Nancy Basley of London, Ont., is congratulating or consoling her.

ROLLING STONE

OLIVER REED threw a party for his brother David's 40th birthday recently in a private suite at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel in Los Angeles.

But posh came to shove when drummer KEITH MOON (one of Reed's favorite drinking buddies since they met during the making of Tommy) arrived. A long table appointed with candelabras and hundreds of dollars worth of flowers had been set up for the 24 guests.

When the maitre d' brought the first course, Reed, sitting at one end of the table, leered up at him, said, "everyone hates the consomme," and Moon chucked his bowl down the table, upsetting one of the candle holders.

The maitre d' smiled and brought a new one. Multiple toasts were drunk and Moon threw his glasses over his shoulder and down the table. As the food was brought, it quickly became airborne; for entertainment between courses, Keith snatched RINGO STARR's serving plate, held it on his head and broke his own over it.

When the prime rib came, Keith picked it up in his hands and began gnawing on it. "I didn't eat," said one of the guests. "There was too much glass flying around."

After a giant cake was rolled in and a woman jumped out of it, Keith and Oliver rolled around in the debris now covering the floor. The ever-indulgent maitre d' finally succumbed when Moon picked up a table, lofted it into the air and smashed a crystal chandelier, sending sparks cascading from the ceiling.

The police were called, but Moon had already left, bleeding from various hand cut. A small price to pay for an evening of fun.

NOT THAT the RONA BARRETTS and JOHN J. MILLERS have had their fun with Beatles reunion concert rumors, let's throw in a couple of facts: While promoter BILL SARGANT had upped his concert guarantee from $30 million to $50 million, RINGO STARR's lawyer, BRUCE GRAKAL, said he didn't reply to Sargant by the Feb. 20 deadline "and I'm sure no one else has. If the four of them ever get together it will be because they want to, not because of dollar offers."

About the report that lawyers for Ringo, JOHN LENNON and GEORGE HARRISON would meet in Australia to discuss plans for a concert and a Columbia-Warner Bros. record deal, Grakal said, "I'm not going anywhere."

He added that Harrison's attorney, DAVID BRAUN, would leave shortly for Australia, but only to work with fellow client NEIL DIAMOND, who's touring there. Grakal said he had not been contacted by Columbia or Warner.

AFTER LOSING A SUITCASE containing $86,000 in Paris last December, IKE and TINA TURNER encountered more international intrigue on a recent trip to Indonesia.

In Jakarta, the duo with their 10-piece band and the IKETTES contracted to do five concerts through Australian promoter JOHN HARRIGAN and a local promoter.

When they arrived at the gig for the first of two shows, they found a sound system consisting of two guitar amps.

After the first show, they told Harrigan they would not go on again unless the facilities were improved and then retreated to their dressing rooms.

In response, the military police surrounded the area and sent a man in to talk to Ike.

Turner, never known as a diplomat, threw him out: but, when another came in with a gun, Ike decided they should do the second show.

After returning to their hotel at 3 a.m., Ike called their L.A. agent, DENNIS RUBENSTEIN, and told him to get them out of there.

Rubenstein booked reservations on a 5 a.m. flight for Hong Kong, where they could make airlines connections to the States.

They quietly left their hotel and were aboard the airliner when the police showed up again and began unloading the equipment, demanding that they, too, get off the plane.

Harrigan convinced the militia that the group was simply going to Hong Kong to shop for a day, and that he would stay as security.

The police allowed them to leave only after removing $22,000 worth of equipment. Harrigan eventually made it back to Australia in one piece and Ika and Tina are in the U.S. now — but their equipment is still in Jakarta.

"I guess we will have to sue the government in Jakarta if we want to get it back," said Rubenstein.

Duke Dies Broke

LONDON — Ireland's premier peer, the seventh Duke of Leinster, who might have been one of Britain's wealthiest men, died penniless in London Monday in a tiny two-room apartment. He was 83.

His widow Vivian said he died "distraught, depressed and utterly penniless" in the room where they had lived for the last six weeks since they left his son's house.

Four times married and four times bankrupt, the duke — Edward Fitzgerald — had a reputation for fast living in his heyday.

His life interest in the family estate would have given him a huge income had he not sold it in 1919 to pay gambling debts.

He succeeded to the dukedom 53 years ago but as he was bankrupt at the time, he was not entitled to take up his hereditary seat in the House of Lords. He finally took it last year after being discharged from bankruptcy in 1970.

$100,000-a-Month AIB Budget Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP Monday challenged the government to justify a $100,000-a-month budget for the administrator of its anti-inflation program who has handled only one case in three months.

Frank Hamilton asked why administrator Donald Tansley, appointed Dec. 31, needed the $298,000 budget for his first three months that was provided for in supplementary spending estimates published Feb. 18.

Revenue Minister Bud Cullen, who answers for the administrator in Parliament, said an examination of the estimates would show the administrator's office costs less than $100,000 a month to run.

Part of the initial budget was to set up the office.

The estimates show that out of the total $298,000, salaries accounted for $83,000 and $92,000 was to hire professionals on contract. The rest was for operating expenses and equipment purchases.

Cullen said that Mr. Tansley should be commended for his work.

Since he started operations, Tansley has had one case—supporting an anti-inflation board recommendation that New Brunswick pulp and paper workers should be held to a 14 per cent pay raise.

He also fined Irving Pulp and Paper Ltd. $125,000 for paying above his approved increase and ordered the company to obey the board ruling.

The Way To Deal With Big Oil Firms

TORONTO (CP) — A delegation from the Labrador Inuit Association has been told by Shetland Island residnts that the key to dealing with international oil companies is to own the land they want to use.

In a dispatch from Lerwick, Shetland Islands, The Globe and Mail says the Canadian group was told by Shetlanders of a bill they devised to give them powers of expropriation over land where oil-related developments might take place.

The bill was passed by the British Parliament in 1974.

Ian Clark, Shetland's chief executive and oil negotiator, said: "We faced up to the fact that they (the oil companies) had no entitlement to the land.

"We suggested that it would be equitable if they agreed with us on a form of compensation for disturbing the environment, the society and our economy."

The Shetland Islands is the Labrador group's first stop on a two-week visit to a number of Scottish communities affected by the North Sea oil boom.

Ouellet Mum In House

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister André Ouellet refused Monday to answer any Commons questions about private interventions on his behalf by other persons, including Public Works Minister C. M. Drury, to the judge in an Ouellet contempt-of-court case.

Ouellet said he cannot talk becaue his contempt conviction is being appealed.

"You are not a lawyer," he told Opposition leader Joe Clark when asked for the third time whether Ouellet had urged Drury, former finance minister John Turner and others to intervene with the trial judge on his behalf.

"If you were, you would realize that someone before the courts has rights and you would respect them."

Clark had said that the information he was seeking could in no way affect the appeal.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster), a lawyer, also said the appeal does not affect the question of intervention on behalf of Ouellet.

Leggatt asked whether Ouellet was invoking a "client-solicitor relationship" with Drury by refusing to answer the questions.

Ouellet refused to comment.

Drury said last week that he and others had intervened on Ouellet's behalf by speaking to Associate Chief Justice James Huggessen of the Quebec Superior Court before Mr. Justice Hugessen heard the contempt case against Ouellet.

The contempt action was launched in late December after Ouellet criticized Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay, also of the Quebec Superior Court, for acquitting three sugar refiners of conspiracy to keep competition out of the Eastern Canada market.

Mr. Justice Mackay in a Feb. 20 letter to federal Justice Minister Ron Basford called Drury's intervention improper.

Basford has asked Chief Justice Jules Descehenes of the Quebec Superior Court to report to him whether he feels anything improper has taken place in contacts with his judges by cabinet ministers and aides.

Gun Control Package Slammed by Tories

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Conservative MPs moved Monday to sever new laws on gun control which they oppose from the rest of the government's proposed "peace and security" legislation.

The government had lumped gun control in with more popular proposals deliberately, Tory justice spokesman Eldon Woolliams claimed.

Woolliams complained that the bill puts many MPs in a position of being "damned if you do and damned if you don't" — having to vote in principle to support gun-control laws in order to support measures to tighten up parole and improve public safety.

The Calgary MP accused the government of trying to give the impression that the proposal to abolish capital punishment is part of the package being debated in the House.

The abolition bill will be brought forward after the "peace and security" legislation has been dealt with.

Wooliams called the peace and security bill "a political poultice" drawn up in such a way as to ensure the support of "restless" Liberal backbenchers.

He moved that the Houuse not vote on the principle of the bill until a committee of MPs has looked into his suggestion that the gun control sections be removed from it.

Acting Speaker Charles Turner said he would make a ruling on the motion later.

Woolliams noted that 39 of the 76 pages of the bill deal with gun control, and that these sections deal with a new law.

The rest of the sections, he argued, are amendments to existing law and could be dealt with as a separate package.

He ridiculed what he called the Liberal government's "brilliant, sinister attempt" to impress the public that it has reduced crime.

Murders, he argued, increased from 426 in 1971 to 545 in 1974.

Under the proposed laws farmers will not be able to shoot gophers to protect their crops without being classed as hunters — "and who eats gophers?" he asked.

India N-Talks Not Open To Debate

OTTAWA (CP) —The government will not debate terms of any nuclear agreement with India, Prime Minister Trudeau told the commons Monday.

It has not been parliamentary custom to follow that procedure since he became prime minister, he said.

There were reports, unconfirmed by Trudeau Monday, that an agreement in principle was reached for the resumtion of nuclear aid to India from Canada.

Canada cut off aid about two years ago after India exploded a nuclear device. Canadian critics asid the explosion was in contravention of Canada-India agreement.

Despite the disagreement between the two countries, negotiations for an aid-agreement resumed last week between Canadian and Indian representatives.

Present negotiations are designed to get India to accept safeguards which Canada thinks are essential now that a nuclear device has been exploded, the prime minister said.

Canada would not resume aid until a satisfactory conclusion has been reached, he added.

AIR FARE BOOSTS UNDER AIB STUDY

OTTAWA (CP) — Domestic air fare increases announced last week by Air Canada, CP Air and Transair have been suspended until April 18 by the Canadian transport commission.

The increases, which were to take effect April 4, are being delayed so the commission can decide whether the new prices comply with the federal anti-inflation guides and transport legislation.

Time Law Raises Ire

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has disappointed and angered some of its strongest supporters in allowing Canadian editions of Reader's Digest to survive under proposed new foreign magazine tax legislation.

Two groups that stood behind State Secretary Huge Faulkner's prolonged campaign for a stronger domestic magazine industry now say the government abandoned its policy by sparing Reader's Digest and allowing the full weight of the legislation to fall on Time Canada.

Officials of the Canadian Periodical Publishers Association and the Committee for an Independent Canada criticized the government in interviews Monday over the last-minute agreement that bestowed Canadian corporate citizenship on Reader's Digest.

The legislation would bar advertisers in foreign-owned magazines and on U.S. border television stations from claiming 100-per-cent tax deductions for their advertising costs.

To qualify as Canadian, magazines would have to be 75 per cent Canadian-owned, free of foreign editorial control and more than 80 per cent different in editorial content from foreign publications.

Faced with an effective doubling of costs because of the legislation. Time last week suspended the six-page weekly Canadian news section it had published since 1943 but said it would continue to sell advertising in the country at reduced rates.

Reader's Digest avoided a similar fate for its monthly English-and French-language domestic editions.

As a result of negotiations as the bill moved through the Commons, the U.S.-owned company agreed to become 75 per cent Canadian-owned and concessions on the content the government agreed to rule.

Revenue Minister Bud Cullen said Reader's Digest could draw editorial material from the same sources as the parent magazine and stay within the 80 per cent rule provided articles are condensed and edited in Canada.

Sheryl Taylor-Munro, executive co-ordinator of the publishers association, a 124-member group of smaller Canadian publishing companies, said the accommodation frustrated the government's original aim of redirecting advertising money from U.S. into Canadian magazines.

In its manoeuvrings to placate dissident Liberals and get the legislation passed, "The government forgot what the purpose of the bill was," she said.

The association expected much of the $19 million spent yearly by advertisers in the two magazines would flow to smaller domestic publications, she said.

Now Reader's Digest would continue receiving its $8-$9 million annual share of the total plus some advertising from Time.

Trudeau Pledge

OTTAWA (FP) — Prime Minister Trudeau gave an undertaking to the commons Monday that before any action is launched in the United Kingdom to patriate the British North America Act, parliament will be consulted and its approval sought.

He also assured MPs that it was not the intention of his government to see a constitution which could be amended unilaterally by the federal government, once it is back in Canada.

Trudeau said that negotiations to bring back the constitution have been going on for almost a year with the various provinces.

The hope had been that there could be agreement rached to find a way to amend the constitution and patriate it.

"I think that we are now about to reach the conclusion that it is unlikely that we will get unanimous agreement from the provinces," he said.

DRIVER IDENTIFIED

ACTON (CP) — Police have identified Eric Couture, 18, of Acton as the driver of a vehicle which collided with another car near here Saturday, killing Couture and six other persons.

Couture, burned beyond recognition, was identified Monday by dental records.

The stolen car he was driving burst into flames when its gas tank exploded in the collision near this community about 10 miles northeast of Guelph.

Ontario Solicitor-General John Macbeth said Monday he has asked for an inquiry into the chase.

Depending on the results of the investigation, he said, "It may be we'll have to have a whole review of high-speed chases, whether they should be prohibited outright or allowed in certain cases."

The Freezing Wait For Games Tickets

MONTREAL (CP) — Buyers waited in line in freezing temperatures Monday when all remaining tickets for the Summer Olympics went on sale at a central ticket office here.

Ken Farmer, director general of spectator services for the Olympic organizing committee, said 2.2 million tickets are available for over-the-counter and mail-order sale and demand seems brisk.

Olympic authorities made two world-wide ticket allocations in 1975 and then pulled in all unsold tickets at the end of the year for first-come, first-served sale at the single outlet here.

As in the previous allocations, buyers receive vouchers for exhange for actual tickets June 1 and afterward. There was an over-all total of 4.5 million tickets to various Olympic events at the outset.

Farmer urged Olympic visitors to void disappointment by writing for availability lists and order forms to the COJO Ticket Office, Post Office Box 1976, Montreal.

Farmer also reported about 900,000 tickets are available for Olympic soccer events in Toronto, Ottawa, Sherbrooke and Montreal.

Organizers would prefer not to sell these tickets until June 1, when it will be known which countries will be playing in the various matches, he added.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

After today's deal has been played in the 1949 National Team-of-four Championships a kibitzer commented to another kibitzer: "There was nothing to the play of the hand. It just about played itself."

As will be observed, he was very, very wrong, although in retrospect the play does appear to be simple. But there was one major obstacle en route that declarer carefully sidestepped.

◇ A K Q 8 4 2

♣ K 10 9 5 4 2	♣ Q J 8 7

SOUTH
♠ A Q 9 8 7 3 2
♡ J 9 4
◇ 9
♣ A 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡.

After winning the opening lead with the heart king, East cashed the ace of hearts. Next came a third heart, south taking the trick with his jack.

Now a diamond was led to the board's ace, and this was followed by a club to South's ace. South's remaining club was then ruffed with dummy's four of trumps. The jack of trumps was led next, and the finesse taken. All the defenders could make from here in was West's king of trumps.

Superficially it may appear as though South's play of the hand was routine. But just try ruffing the three of clubs before playing South's singleton diamond to dummy's ace. When declarer next takes the trump finesse, West wins with the king and exits with his singleton diamond to dummy's ace.

Whether declarer now leads a heart or a diamond off dummy in order to get back to the South hand to pick up West's remaining trumps, he will go down. Presumably he will ruff the trick—and West will overruff with his ten-spot.

Or, going back to trick three, declarer, let us say, elects to win the third heart lead with dummy's queen, and promptly leads the jack of trumps and finesses. Again West will capture the trick with the king, and return his singleton diamond to dummy's ace. If declarer now draws trumps, he willl lose a club trick. And if he ruffs away his losing club with dummy's remaining trump, he will be unable to re-enter the South hand to pick up West's two remaining trumps.

As was stated, declarer's play appears to be routine. To prove that it really wasn't, try this deal on some of your friends, to see whether they cash the diamond ace before ruffing out the losing club.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Wednesday, March 10

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take new look at legal agreement that might include worth of property. Someone is involved who could be deliberately obscuring certain facts. Be alert, dynamic, independent. You are getting chance now to display some unique talents.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be more observant than usual. You have choice of two directions. Examine possibilities — and potential. Regular procedure, routine could be upset. Aquarius, Leo and Cancer persons figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): There are more opportunities than in recent past. Keep rein on budget, but be willing to invest in beliefs, talents. Refuse to be restricted, short-changed. Ask questions — make inquiries. Take advantage of chance to meet exciting, creative people.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lunar cycle is such that you are more able to direct your own destiny. Be confident, forthright. State case in clear manner. Emphasis on personality, appearance. Love could bind an agreement. Home, property might be involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be ready for quick change, variety, special attraction to member of opposite sex. Aura of romance prevails. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius individuals could figure prominently. Some of your calls, queries could be misinterpreted. Know it — give others benefit of doubt.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends express differences and could attempt to pull you into centre of foolish controversy. Remain aloof. Realize that those who argue today could embrace tomorrow — and mark you as a villain. Stay out of it!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Shakeup indicated in "high places." Know it and be sure your own interests are protected. One who exercised power may not be on the outside, looking in. You'll be dealing with Pisces, Virgo individuals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Organize priorities—let others know you have allies. Exhibit deterrent "weapons." Capricorn, Cancer could be in picture. Accent on communication, hidden material, fears, doubts and utilization of surprise as a way to catch opponent off guard. Take cash, let credit go.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-21): You may have to call halt to cat-mouse game. Member of opposite sex seems not to want to grow up — you are not to be surrogate mama or papa. Know it and stand tall. Self-esteem should no longer be assailed. Aries, Libra persons could figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friend who lacks confidence confides foibles. Don't cast first stone. Be willing to wait and see. Listen to laments, suggestions from partner, mate. Accent public relations, review of legal right, permissions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Light touch is best for now. You do not have access to alo necessary facts. That being so, tread in delicate manner. Listen, learn and evaluate. Another Aquarian has fascinating story to relate. Don't take as gospel all you hear.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get what you want, but you may have asked for too much at one sitting. Strive for moderation. Popularity quotient is high — know it and realize you don't have to force issues. Support comes from Gemini.

IF MARCH 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, indepedent, creative, temperamental and often spoiled by the opposite sex. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. August could be your most significant month of 1976, a year during which you enlarge horizons, gain wider recognition and better distribution of product. You also get rid of losing proposition.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

A prime number is one that has no factors other than itself and unity. For example, 7 and 11 are prime, but 4 and 15 are not.

In this easy addition each distinct letter stands for a particular but different digit. Of course we want prime TANS, so what's the value of that?

CONSUMER INFORMATION from SAFEWAY

AT CANADA SAFEWAY WE WANT TO BE SURE YOU ARE ALWAYS CHARGED THE CORRECT PRICE

Therefore we price mark every advertised item or non-advertised item at the reduced price with the exception of Baby Foods, Candy items, Cigarettes and Kool-Aid — With the exception of the above — every jar, package, bottle or carton that is sold at less than the regular price is price marked or re-marked with the reduced price for as long as the special price is in effect. Also in accordance with our pricing policy, all stock marked at the reduced special price will be sold at that price until it is sold out.

IT'S TIME TO THINK METRIC

Nearly every packaged grocery item you buy now shows the weight or contents in two ways . . . the way we have grown up with, Imperial or Avoirdupois measure, and Metric. Some items such as Toothpastes, Dry Dog Foods and some Ice Creams already show only hard metric measures.

Over the next few years many other items will change to metric measures. Either soft metric (metric equivalent to existing sizes) or hard metric.

During this time Canada Safeway will do two things to help you think metric and to become familiar with metric units of measure.

1. UNIT PRICE TICKETS As various product categories change, our Unit Price Tickets will help you compare. While the majority of items in a group are still in pounds, for example, our computer tickets will convert brands in metric weights back to the unit cost per pound. Once metric weights are in the majority, the computer will convert any brands still packed in pounds to the equivalent unit cost per kilo.

2. IN OUR ADVERTISING Starting very shortly, as space permits we will start showing the metric equivalent. For example, Busy Baker Soda Crackers 1 lb. Pkg. (454g.)

OPEN DATING POLICY AT SAFEWAY

Until a standardized dating program is established we will continue with our present open dating policy. This will ensure our Safeway Brand products are fresh and good for many more days after you take them home. Our Dairy products which are also open dated should also be kept under proper refrigeration.

STANDARDIZED NAMES FOR BEEF CUTS

Effective on March 1st 1976, many beef cuts will have new standardized names. This standardization has been a voluntary move on the part of the meat industry on the request of the Department Of Consumer And Corporate Affairs. The new standard names will indicate to the customer the part of the carcass each cut comes from. To assist our customers we show below the respective retail cuts which come from each of the primal cuts. The former terminology used by Safeway is shown in brackets.

Which Plant? Answer Questions

We are frequently asked to recommend a plant for a given location or purpose without knowing, or being able to obtain from the home gardener, sufficient information to offer a reasonable suggestion. Each of us have plants we know and plants we prefer over others. Plants that appeal because of some feature to which one or more of our senses respond.

These are the first to come to mind, but they may not be suited to the location, the soil, or the desired purpose of the gardener seeking help.

For example, the gardener needs a plant to go against a fence. Why is it needed? To fill an empty space, provide privacy, or shelter other plants? What is the maximum height and width needed to fill the space? Is it best to use a plant within these limits or a large plant that will stand annual shearing and make a dense mass?

What kind of fence? Open for air circulation or tight boards that reflect heat? Which point of the compass will the plant face? Is it in full sun, part sun, dappled shade, or dense shade?

If in tree shade, does the tree lose its leaves in winter or is it a dense evergreen? Should the plant have flowers and be deciduous, a flowering evergreen, or non-flowering?

Is the soil a loose loam suitable for fine roots, or heavy soil requiring strong roots to penetrate? How far back from the property line can the plant be placed so as not to interfere with neighbors or spread over municipal property? Is a low growing shrub desired or would a low growing tree be better?

Is it adjoining a lawn that will be heavily fertilized all summer? What effect will this have on its natural growth? Will weed sprays or weed inhibitor fertilizers be used and cause damage?

What effect will strong roots have on adjacent plants or lawn? Are adjacent plants acid-soil types or not? A lilac and a rhododendron cannot live side by side.

When we have authentic answers to these questions, not guesses, it is possible to pinpoint the plant types most likely to suit the purpose and location, and from these to suggest species and varieties that could be used effectively.

But the suggestion is still the idea of someone else, someone with definite likes and dislikes which may be quite different from those of the gardener seeking help. This is proven by the number of gardeners who say a certain plant is not to their liking but the nurseryman recommended it.

The only way to obtain complete satisfaction is to make one's own choice. First, obtain books from the library on shrubs and trees, their preference as to soil and location, and their ultimate size.

You will find hundreds of names you have never heard before, and lovely plants you have never seen although they are quite suited to this climate. Make a list of the questions to be answered, and another list of plants that appear suitable.

Then visit nurseries that specialize in these kinds of plants. See them in spring, summer, autumn, and winter. Also scan plant lists and catalogues for the plants you think suitable.

Give the nurseryman your list of the above questions and your answers so that he can at least advise you of unsuitable kinds.

Then, knowing the plants available and their appearance at all seasons, choose from the suitable group the one having the greatest appeal — that is, appeal to you the person who has to live with it.

CHOPPER PILOT, FAMILY FLEE

BANGKOK (UPI) — A young South Vietnamese army officer stole the helicopter he was learning to fly and fled with a sergeant and five family members to Thailand, police sources said today.

The sources said the lieutenant landed the helicopter Monday at Makham, 145 miles southeast of Bangkok, and asked for political asylum.

Police are holding the seven Vietnamese and the helicopter for further investigation.

It was the first aircraft known to have flown out of Vietnam since shortly after the surrender of the pro-U.S. government last April 30.

The new Saigon government conducted a low-key recruiting campaign for the air force and navy last year. But many former pilots for the pro-U.S. regime were rejected because they had family connections abroad and the government apparently feared the theft of their aircraft.

CBC Strike May Spread

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — CBC operations in Windsor were disrupted today by a 24-hour strike by 81 employees, members of Local 678 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

A union official said CBC outlets in other cities might also be affected by similar strikes.

Members of other CBC unions refused to cross picket lines established by 59 Local 678 members at CBET-TV and 22 at CBE and CBEF radio outlets.

Stan Raymond, local president, said members decided Monday night to take the strike action "to emphasize the failure in contract talks between CBC and the national bargaining unit."

Local 678 represents announcers, clerical and office workers, production assistants, stage hands, film camera men and film editors, and script assisstants.

Mr. Raymond said the union has been without a CBC contract since last July.

He said the Windsor strike was called to emphasize the union's "total frustration at the bargaining table."

There is a strong possibility, he said, that similar strike action could take place at CBC operations in other cities.

The picket lines, established at 4 a.m., were not crossed by the 47 Windsor mambers of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians who have also been without a contract since last summer.

Members of the Canadian Wire Service Guild at CBE and CBEF also refused to cross the picket lines.

Bruce Macpherson, manager of CBE and CBEF, said the four members of management who crossed picket lines were not attempting to maintain a normal programming schedule.

He said the stations are being kept on the air and regular programming should resume Wednesday.

A CBET-TV spokesman said the strike probably will force cancellation of three taping sessions.

He said it would also likely result in an abbreviated evening news program.

"We'll probably go to 30 minutes instead of an hour and then use a fill-in for the remaining time."

Gulf Royalties Go to Angola

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Gulf Oil Corp. said today it has given the Soviet-backed faction in Angola the royalties for off-shore oil wells put in escrow last December.

The money was for payment of third-quarter 1975 income tax and fourth-quarter 1975 royalty on oil production, plus interest, for oil drilling in the Angolan enclave of Cabinda.

Gulf said it was also negotiating with the Peoples Republic of Angola for resumption of oil drilling in Cabinda under new arrangements.

The Angolan operations represented about 8 to 10 per cent of all Gulf overseas profits. Gulf had 125 wells, averaging about 14,000 barrels of oil a day.

Gulf had been under pressure last fall from the state department not to make royalty payments to the pro-Soviet faction. The oil company paid an estimated $500 million annually in royalty to the Angola government prior to the civil war.

$5M Cost Overrun On Cruise Missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Navy is ordering a halt to development work on a sea-launched cruise missile by the Vought Corp. because of a cost overrun estimated at $4 million to $5 million.

The action announced Monday raised the possibility that Vought could be dropped from competition for a potentially big program—estimated now to run about $625 million—unless General Dynamics Corp. fails in an important test of its version of the missile.

General Dynamics is the only firm competing with Vought on the project, and the navy said General Dynamics has indicated it expects to come in below costs assigned for the development work.

The navy said that, depending on the outcome of a General Dynamics test next week, it might cancel the stop work order to Vought and resume the competition. The radar cross-section test is intended to show how much of a target the missile would present to enemy defences, a navy spokesman said.

The sea-launched cruise missile, called the Tomahawk, is designed to be fired from submarine torpedo tubes and possibly from surface warships at targets about 2,000 miles away.

Wilkinson Jail Inmate Released

An inmate at Wilkinson Road jail was ordered released by Mr. Justice Harry McKay in B.C. Supreme Court Monday.

He ruled that Gordon Norman Comley was being detained illegally at the jail.

Vancouver lawyer Gordon Hayes, who presented the habeas corpus application to court, told Mr. Justice McKay that Comley was being detained in custody illegally and that this had continued since Jan. 13.

Regional crown counsel Wally Anderson and the crown's position is that "we cannot find any basis in the circumstances to challenge the application."

After a short adjournment, McKay said "it appears quite clear to me" that Comley was being held illegally and he signed the release order in court.

Airport Walkout

MONTREAL (CP) — A walkout by 26 operators of passenger transfer vehicles at Montreal's new Mirabel airport has not affected traffic at the international facility, an airport spokesman said Sunday. Employees began calling in sick early Saturday to back demands for increased wages. The operators are demanding parity with colleagues in Toronto.

CTC HEARINGS IN VICTORIA

Dayliner Gets Bumpy Ride

AB KENT
Times Staff

Getting aboard the E and N Dayliner can be as big an adventure as riding the bouncy, lurching diesel car a witness told members of the Canadian Transport Commission here Monday.

The CTC railway committee is hearing public and corporate submissions on an application by CP Rail to discontinue its passenger rail service between Victoria and Parksville and to abandon its right of way north of Parksville to Courtenay.

Among several witnesses protesting the application was Ronald Smith, regional planner for the Cowichan Valley Regional District, who said he rode the Dayliner last week to get an impression of the Malahat scenery.

He described how he drove from his home at Cowichan Station to the local station and having to park some distance away due to the layout.

Then he had to traverse a large mound of gravel and descend into a dry creek bed caused by flooding, "and eventually you get to the station."

"Sounds like quite an adventure," commented chairman D. H. Jones.

Once aboard the train Smith said the service was excellent. There were about three passengers and the ratio of staff to passengers was 2-3.

But under way, the car bounced up and down and shifted from side to side, possibly due to a lack of gravel on the road bed, Smith suggested.

However, adding insult to injury, the conductor would not accept the CPR credit card proferred by Smith, even though its accompanying brochure said the card was valid throughout the CP hotel and transportation system.

The conductor said he couldn't take the card because he didn't have a machine to process it, Smith said. He called the E and N ticketing system "antiquated."

At Chemainus a catstrophe is waiting to happen, he went on. The station there is in "deplorable condition. It's doubtful whether it's repairable," with the south end leaning way from the rest of the building.

Several witnesses drew attention of the transport commission's ruling in 1970 that E and N must upgrade and keep in clean, safe condition its station facilities.

Smith said in conjunction with the provincial government the regional district had undertaken a transportation study recognizing the role of its seaports, its two railway lines, highways and air service, which ought to function as a integrated system.

One of the first things noticed was that the E and N service did not reach communities at the right time of day to be useful.

Smith said a trial schedule was worked out in which the Dayliner would leave Nanaimo at 6:40 a.m. southbound, reaching Ladysmith, Chemainus, Crofton, Duncan and Shawnigan Lake at a convenient time for travellers to be in Victoria by 8:10.

It could then turn around to take travellers from Victoria up-Island to the end of steel at Courtenay, which it could reach by noon, in plenty of time to make a return trip south before evening.

Smith noted the population of Cowichan Valley Regional District will likely be 113,000 by 2000, with the lower part of the district sending about 35 per cent of its population to work each day in Victoria. That would represent too many people using the highway, making an alternative such as the railway a necessity.

District chairman Patrick R. Clements, of Duncan, said the district opposes any cutback in E and N service, also citing population growth of an average 13.5 per cent a year and as much as 24 per cent in the southern part.

Clements said he noted CPR officials ask why people don't use the Dayliner, as if there is something wrong with people who ignore it. "I sometimes wonder what's the matter with people who do ride it," Clements said, referring to the run-down condition of the facilities.

"I won't ride on that thing because of the conditions and the time," he said, adding he could not encourage people to use the train. "It's a disservice to the Cowichan Valley."

Another Cowichan resident, Joseph Elliott, of Indian Reserve No. 1, questioned the validity of a 1961 transfer of 11.3 acres of reserve land to the railway and drew attention to an historic arrangement allowing Indians to ride the train for half fare in exchange for the original grant of land to the E and N.

But Tom Sampson, of Saanich, president of the South Vancouver Island Tribal Federation, said the special fare is seldom claimed because of the abuse Indians suffer at the hands of railway employees.

He called the half-fare "a curse as far as the Indians are concerned" because it led to discrimination. Indians had been treated disgracefully by the railway. "I remember (when the CPR operated ferries from Victoria) we were never allowed to go upstairs, we had to stay with the baggage, and we couldn't even use the bathrooms."

Those who tried to get half-fare tickets would be embarrassed when asked to prove they were Indians, Sampson said.

Sampson said train transport is needed, but the Indians must be consulted before any decision on the E and N application is made. So far there had been no involvement with tribes on whose land the railway runs.

He said Indians had lost millions of acres of land by expropriation "and never benefited by a red cent. Indians are the sole owners of this country and have yet to benefit by the CPR."

Now, he said, "you people are being stepped on." The Indians know how it is to be crushed; "you're next," Sampson said.

A different view was put forward by Dennis Showers, who said he represented only himself, but who was formerly connected with Pacific Tours Ltd. and the Victoria Pacific Railway.

He urged the E and N to start excursion runs between Victoria and Duncan or between Parksville and Port Alberni during the May-September season. Pacific Tours had once proposed using the line for its own excursion service, he said, and had also suggested a service in which the E and N would supply crews, but this was too "horrendous" a problem to sort out.

Thomas Tryon, president of the 26-member Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island, said the key to more use of the railway was good service and good management. Trains are the only answer to the energy crisis and pollution; "Why cannot CP Rail see this?"

Part of the company's application, to drop its right of way north of Parksville, is based on the unsafe condition of two trestles it does not want to replace.

"Two million dollars to replace two bridges is not too much to ask from a company that has such control of the Canadian economy," Tryon said.

Betty Deacon, representing the Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce, said the raising of fares to $11.10, compared with $5.80 by bus, was a "very deliberate attempt" to discourage passenger travel on the Dayliner.

She noted the railway had ignored several of the commission's previous rulings and had failed to maintain the track properly.

Much of the money required to replace the bridges should be in hand if the company had made proper allowance for depreciation, she said, and suggested the company may already be in contempt of the transport commission for failing to meet its obligations.

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith, in opposing the application, noted meagre advertising, no attempt to make connections with other transport, no excursions and the ignoring of historical obligations of the CPR.

S. W. Stokes, representing members of the Nanaimo-Cowichan-and-the-Islands NDP constituency, presented a submission with 104 signatures calling for expropriation of the E and N if the railway fails to meet its obligations. There should be no compensation to CP Rail because the assets of the company had been paid for "many times over," he said.

Shareholders could be paid for part of their holdings at market value on a scale inverse to the number of shares held, he suggested.

Closing branch rail lines had increased, rather than diminished regional economic disparity in Canada, the only industrialized nation reducing railway service, Stokes said.

406 More Charges Facing Doyle

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A total of 406 counts of fraud were laid in provincial court Monday against Montreal financier John C. Doyle, local businessman Dan Landrigan and three other men. All five are still being sought by RCMP to stand trial for earlier charges of fraud.

The charges were laid as a result of an RCMP investigation into the trading of shares of Canadian Javelin Ltd. and its subsidiary, Bison Petroleum and Minerals Ltd., between Nov. 27, 1974, and Jan. 10, 1975.

Doyle is a director of Canadian Javelin and was its chairman until he resigned last summer. He has been free on bail since last year on earlier charges of fraud and breach of trust relating to disposition of funds at the former Canadian Javelin linerboard mill at Stephenville, Nfld. The mill has since been taken over by the provincial government and operates as Labrador Linerboard Ltd.

Landrigan was director of Parsons and Landrigan Ltd., an investment company that went into liquidation last May.

DRIVER NAMED

Colwood RCMP have released the name of the driver of a car that crashed into a greenhouse at 486 Island Highway on Sunday and caused an estimated $50,000 damage.

He was Gary Pattyn Lewis, 31, of 2501 Blanshard.

Police said Lewis received an arm injury in the mishap which occurred at 8:20 p.m. He was treated at hospital and later released.

Gizmo Claim Disputed

OTTAWA (CP) — If you drive a car, says the advertisement, you should have a Bion 78 — a little plug-in gizmo called "a negative-ion generator."

At about $50, should you?

Helen Duffy, who owns a Weston, Ont., company that sells the generators, says she wouldn't be without one, saying the machines produce a feeling of wellbeing and alertness — especially useful for drivers.

George Tamura, a National Research Council investigator in Ottawa, says anyone who buys one of the machines is wasting money because negative-ion generators have no effect at all on normal people.

But he adds that "for some unknown reason, they sometimes give temporary relief to people with respiratory problems."

Machines that charge the air with negative ions have been on the market since the 1930s and scientists have been arguing among themselves and with promoters since then as to whether they have any health value.

All air is filled with tiny charged particles called ions — some negative, some positive.

Advocates of ion generators say that when air circulation is poor the air acquires a preponderance of positive ions that make people tired, irritable and depressed.

Enter a negative-ion generator, they say, and it will redress the balance in favor of the negative ions, making people feel better.

Tamura, who works for a branch of the NRC's division of building research, said that this is nonsense.

"When you're confined in an office or car that has little ventilation what is actually bothering you are the odors that come from contaminants in your mouth and on your skin," he said.

Tamura said an advertisement placed in the February issue of Canadian Motorist magazine by Mrs. Duffy's company — Biotron International — for a negative-ion generator, is full of speculation.

He says no one has ever scientifically proven the ad's first claim that a change in ion balance affects people.

Tamura says the ad's second claim — that air pollution strips negative ions from the air — is also far fetched.

"They're not lost at all," he said. "Their charge is transferred to larger particles."

He says the third claim — that positive-ion winds such as the Chinook cause listlessness, sleeplessness and feverishness "has not been substantiated to my knowledge."

The advertisement goes on to say that bathroom showers are excellent sources of negative ions, and that's why it feels so good to take one.

Tamura argues that other factors like the water temperature and your mood are involved.

The advertisement quotes Edward Napke, a doctor working for the federal health department, as supporting negative ions.

"I have never talked to a representative of that company," Napke said.

GAMES ACCIDENT

4 Workers Die in Fall

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Four construction workers died Monday night when a concrete slab which was being installed at the Olympic stadium plummeted 185 feet to the ground.

The victims were inside the hollow slab working to attach two 70-ton cement sections in place when the accident occurred.

The sections had been temporarily in place for several days.

Jean-Claude Lebrun, spokesman for the Quebec Federation of Labor's building trades council, told a reporter today: "We are waiting for reports to come in.

"If it is confirmed there was negligence involved, we will demand an inquiry by the department of manpower, and we may hold an inquiry ourselves as well."

Henry Tamaki, spokesman for Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd., which employed the workers, said a statement is being prepared.

Guy Toupin, Montreal Urban Community police deputy director who is in charge of Olympic security, said investigators will need a few days to determine exactly what happened.

"At first sight, it appears to be accidental," he said. "An investigation is under way and our men have already been on the site."

Police identified the dead as Xavier Harvey, 43, of Chicoutimi, Que., Paul-Emile Leveu, 41, of Montreal, Benoit Breton, 27, of Levis, Que., and Bertrand Fortin, 23, of Montreal.

Two other workers were treated in hospital for nervous shock and later released.

Fellow workers said there was a noise like thunder when the four fell to their deaths in the beam which crushed a truck when it landed at the base of the tower.

"We heard a great noise and the top of the beam started to fall," said Giovani Ricardo, a compressor operator who was working nearby.

"One guy started to jump out on the way down, but he landed on top of the sections when they struck the ground. The three others were trapped inside. It was horrible."

Freddie Allo, a truck driver, said: "It just fell. It sonded like it was thunder."

Two hours after the accident, Mayor Jean Drapeau visited the site, where the Quebec government took over construction in November from the City of Montreal.

"Every large construction project has a certain number of accidents per million dollars of construction," Drapeau said.

"The record shows that we are below the average. But we can never be too low."

The stadium will be used for the opening and closing ceremonies of the Summer Games.

Site engineer Lionel Reeves said he did not expect the accident to seriously affect the tight construction sehedule on the project.

Construction worker Jean-Marie Lesage was killed and four others injured last August when a 85-ton concrete support beam broke losse and fell 70 feet to the stadium floor.

$3.2M DEMAND

FRANKFURT (AP) — A gunman seeking freedom for an accused bank robber seized two hostages in a courthouse here today and demanded $3.2 million and passage on a West German jetliner to Cuba, police reported.

The gunman also demanded a helicopter or automobile with bullet-proof windows to ferry him and the robber suspect to Frankfurt airport.

41,000 More Firms Under Price Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — The wage and price controls program has been extended to 41,000 more companies employing 500,000 workers, effective from Dec. 16.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald announced Monday the government has accepted an anti-inflation board recommendation that controls should apply to certain key industries in which major companies bargain with labor as a group. The industries are construction, trucking, grain handling, longshoring and most of the shipping industry.

The board maintained these industries are strategically important for containing inflation and must be directly regulated.

Many West Coast Labor leaders could not be reached for comment.

Roy Gautier, secretary of the B.C.-Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council, said, however, the move is "just another extention" of the existing imbalanced effort to deal with prices and profits.

The council co-ordinates bargaining among construction unions and Gautier said: "on the contractors' side, we can't see any method of controlling their profits."

The board also was authorized Monday to initiate a similar study to determine whether property and casualty insurance companies — so-called general insurers as opposed to life insurance companies — should be brought under the controls program.

The effect of the federal decision to bring industries that engage in association bargaining under direct controls is to extend the restraints program to smaller companies.

Originally, the controls were to apply directly only to companies with 500 or more employees, or to construction companies that employed 20 or more.

But many smaller companies, particularly in construction, join together as an association to engage in collective bargaining. Most of the 41,000 additional companies being brought under the controls by the new measure are construction companies with less than 20 employees.

As a result of extending controls over the five industries, a greater proportion of each of the five industries will be regulated, the board says.

In construction, between 75 and 80 per cent of the industry, measured in terms of union man-hours, will be covered, compared with less than 40 per cent previously.

In trucking, between 60 and 70 per cent of the industry in terms of dollar revenues will be brought under controls, compared with 20 per cent before.

Up to 90 per cent of grain handling companies' labor force will be controlled, compared with 65 per cent previously.

For shipping industries, controls will be extended to 80 per cent of companies, measured in terms of tonnage weight and manpower, compared with 40 per cent before.

And for longshoring industries, 90 per cent of the labor force will be controlled, up from less than 20 per cent.

INSPECTORS at the Olympic site in Montreal check one of the huge concrete beams which fell 185 feet Monday night, carrying four workers to their deaths. The beam also crushed a truck.

★ BREAD HIKE APPROVED

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board announced today that it has reviewed and approved a recent increase of one cent a loaf in the wholesale price of bread in Western Canada by McGaven-Toastmaster of Vancouver and Toronto-based Weston Bakeries Ltd.

Beryl Plumptre, board vice-chairman, said in a prepared statement the increase resulted from higher costs considered legitimate under the selective pay and price controls program.

The one-cent increase at the wholesale level will mean a "slightly greater increase" at the retail level, she said.

The increase was announced by the two bakeries about two weeks ago and applies only to bread in the western provinces.

Mrs. Plumptre said the retail price increase had not immediately gone up in all western cities.

She said the board's food price monitoring program found last week that Dominion Stores in Regina were holding the price while Safeway, Co-op and Loblaws had increased the price in that city.

Supervalue and IGA stores in Vancouver also had increased the price.

DOW TOPS 1,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market briefly scaled the 1,000 mark of the Dow Jones industrial average Tuesday but almost as quickly retreated below that critical psychological landmark.

The noon Dow average was ahead 7.48 at 996.22, but about 45 minutes after trading began the average was up about 11 points at around 1,001—the first time in more than three years the market had achieved that level. New York Stock Exchange listed gainers held a 3-1 lead over losers.

Brokers said the market apparently was riding the momentum of Monday's 15.82-point rally, helping the Dow hit the 1,000 mark that eluded the market in several attempts two weeks ago. But they said profit-taking cut into Tuesday's earlier gains.

Watson Quits PWA

EDMONTON (CP) — Don Watson, president of provincially-owned Pacific Western Airlines, resigned Monday in the latest development following the government's decision to move PWA's head office here from Vancouver.

Rod MacDaniel, chairman of the PWA board, announced the resignation of Watson, 54, of Vancouver, after a board meeting here.

The proposed move, which Watson has said could destroy the airline because of the additional cost of millions of dollars, has also met opposition from British Columbia cabinet ministers, the Canadian Airline Pilots' Association and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Watson had been with PWA for 18 pears, the last five as president and chief executive officer.

Last December he declined an offer to become president or chairman of the board of Air Canada.

He is succeeded by Rhys Eaton, 40, of Edmonton, executive vice-president of finance and planning.

MacDaniel said Watson will remain a special advisor to the board but declined comment on why Watson resigned or if the resignation had been forced.

Alberta Transport Minister High Horner told the legislature earlier Monday the airline's board of directors had been asked to prepare a timetable for the transfer.

An injunction is being sought against the transfer by Chris Harder of Edmonton, who says he owns one PWA share. Mr. Justice James Cavanaugh will hold a hearing on the application Wednesday.

New Lebanon Fort Seized By Rebel Moslem Troops

BEIRUT (UPI) — Moslem troops rebelled in southeast Lewbanon today, seizing a barracks and the second medieval fortress in two days. Premier Rashid Karami said the unrest in Army ranks had caused a grave situation and the government had foiled attempts to partition the country.

Karami confirmed the takeover of barracks and two ancient castle strongholds in Lebanon by army rebels. He said there had been attempts to create "two peoples, two Lebanons and two armies."

"But we have foiled them," Karami said. He was apparently returning to earlier events in Lebanon during the civil war.

Speaking in parliament, Karami said the consequences of the latest rebel action "could be grave."

He appealed for the army to retain its present status and avoid being tampered with "since the army represents national unity."

Karami's confirmation of a new rebel uprising posed a new threat to his government and Syrian peace negotiators arrived to help stem the crisis within the ranks of the army.

The rebellion today at Rashaya, a few miles from the Syrian border, followed a similar revolt Monday by artillerymen at Arnoun, about 15 miles to the southwest near the Israeli frontier.

The Arnoun rebels announced they were joining the "Lebanese Arab army," a group of Moslem soldiers who deserted from the Lebanese army during the 10-month civil war over allegations of pro-Christian bias.

Former defence minister Joseph Skaf told reporters that today's rebellion had been taken over by the Lebanese Arab army.

The deserters' army, led by Lt. Ahmed Khatib, numbers between 300 and 500 troops and previously has been active in northern and eastern Lebanon. The rebels have refused amnesty offers to lay down their arms.

GROG

The navy's rum tot days weren't exactly what nostalgic types would have you believe and there are many that are glad they're gone.

While hands below their ranks had to take their rum diluted with water in the early days and soft drinks in latter years, petty officers and chief petty officers could draw theirs straight.

At least one CPO is known to have died of overdrinking. See story on page 15.

Pound Plummet Stops

LONDON (AP) — The British pound, which plummeted to record lows Monday before levelling off and closing at $1.9440 in U.S. currency, was slightly higher on foreign exchange markets today.

The ailing currency was quoted at $1.9475 U.S. and $1.191 Canadian in early trading, and one dealer said sentiment toward the pound had improved.

He said he was certain the Bank of England, Britain's central bank, had not intervened in the market to support sterling in early dealings by buying up pounds.

Dealers disagreed over whether the bank was instrumental in halting Monday's slide of the pound, which at one point was at $1.9275.

The pound dropped below the $2 mark for the first time in history Friday.

$150,000 COCAINE ON PAIR

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver city police officers, investigating two suspicious persons at a restaurant Monday, found them in possession of three pounds of cocaine, a vial of liquid hash and two handguns.

Police said the cocaine had a street value between $150,000 to $200,000.

The officers went to a West Braodway hotel restaurant about 1:30 p.m. to check a man and a woman who were "acting drunk and slumping over their table."

They found three pounds of cocaine in a plastic shopping bag and the hashish and guns in their clothing.

Charged with possession for the purpose of trafficking and possession of restricted weapons are Gerald Kenny, 23, and Katherine Fong, 22, both of no fixed address.

COSTLY GUEST

OTTAWA (CP) — Prince Charles' visit to the Arctic last year cost taxpayers $265,000, documents tabled at a Commons committee showed Monday.

The Prince of Wales spent three days in Ottawa last April before visiting communities across the North.

Also included in supplementary spending estimates for 1975-76 is $90,000 for preparations for the Queen's July visit to open the Olympic Games in Montreal.

Union Appeals

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian Paperworkers' Union filed a petition with the federal cabinet today in an effort to reverse the Anti-Inflation Board's decision last month to disallow a contract settlement with Irving Pulp and Paper Co.

Indians Grab Military Land at Williams Lake

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — The Toosey Indian band has claimed 100,000 acres of Department of National Defence land near here and will keep all military personnel off the land, a band spokesman said Monday.

Chief Ray Hance said the declaration is part of a long-standing claim and was prompted by the possibility that an Indian cultural education centre near the reserve will be closed because of a lack of government funding.

Hance said an agreement for $96,000 annual federal funding in quarterly payments to the Fish Lake centre still is in effect, but no payments have been made since April, 1975.

He said this non-payment was initially in response to a general policy by Indians in British Columbia to refuse government funding last year, but that when Fish Lake directors later decided to seek the money it was not forthcoming.

"We are just hanging on," said Hance. "There is a danger the centre will be lost if we don't get help soon."

He said the $8 million worth of buildings, on a small section of the claimed land, were formerly used by the Department of Indian Affairs but the department's operations closed three years ago because of high expenses and high student turnover.

Fish Lake directors have demonstrated they can run the centre for much less money than the government, he said, and have a turnover rate of five per cent compared with 50 per cent for the federal government's program.

He said he has received no response to telegrams sent to Defence Minister James Richardson and Indian Affairs minister Judd Buchanan giving Feb. 20 as a deadline for reply to the claim.

The band has declared the area off limits to the military now but will lift the restriction once land negotiations begin, the chief said.

He added there has been no confrontation with the military "because we haven't seen any military people there."

The 100,000-acre parcel was given by the province to the federal government in 1912 in exchange for the University of B.C. endowment lands in Vancouver.

The Toosey Indian band's claim is similar to that of a number of Chilliwacck bands which jointly operate the Coqualeetza cultural education centre at Chilliwack.

Toronto, N.Y. Make Hefty Gains

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market recorded some hefty gains in busy mid-afternoon trading Tuesday, influenced by a sharp advance at New York.

Moving against the market trend, the index of gold shares lost 2.29 to 324.58.

Volume by 2 p.m. was 1.76 million shares, down from 1.80 million at the same time Monday. Gains led advances 208 to 166 with 227 issues unchanged.

New York Tests 1,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market hovered around the 1,000 mark in the Dow Jones industrial average today, actually passing that landmark twice in the session.

The Dow had an 11.10-point gain at 999.84 at 2 p.m. Thirty minutes earlier, the average had a reading of 1,000.08 and about 45 minutes after trading began Tuesday, the Dow made it to 1,001.

The 1,000 level had been reached in only two other periods in New York Stock Exchange history—for a few brief moments in January 1966, and more lastingly in the winter of 1972-73 when the Dow set its record high of 1,051.70.

The last close above the 1,000 mark was Feb. 13, 1973.

Gainers led losers by a 2-to-1 margin in active trading among NYSE-listed issues.

Sony Corp. was the NYSE volume leader, adding ⅛ to $8⅝, including a 121,000-share block at $8½.

J.C. Penney, reporting sharply higher 53-week profits, rose 2⅝ to $57½.

Among other gainers, Halliburton was up 3¾ to $144¾, U.S. Steel 2 to $87 and Kodak 2¼ to $111½.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices among senior industrials were mixed in moderate trading Tuesday on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. was 447,100 shares, compared with 348,500 shares traded up to the same time Monday.

Alcan Aluminium was up ¼ at $26⅛, Abitibi Paper ⅛ at $13⅛ and BP Canada ½ at $10½. Steinberg's Ltd. A was off ½ at $18¾, Baton Broadcasting ⅛ at $8, Celanese Canada ¼ at $6¼ and Massey-Ferguson ½ at $30¾.

London

AT LONDON, stock prices were mixed in quiet trading Tuesday, The Financial Times index slipped 0.1 to 411.4 by the close of trading. Bank and oil shares drifted lower after opening a little stronger. Canadian issues were generally higher in light trading.

Tense Finishes in Brier; Sparkes Rebounds for Two

REGINA (CP) — Cliff-hangers and pressure shots were the order of the day Monday in the Canadian Men's curling championship, and through it all Wayne Sokolosky of Calgary emerged as the clear-cut leader after four rounds.

Sokolosky, who has been consistently in command of his draw weight, used it to effect in defeating Clare DeBlonde of Winnipeg 6-5 in an extra end in a split third draw.

The result gave him a 3-0 record, with his next closest rival being Dave Sullivan of Fredericton, N.B., who made probably the biggest shot so far in the championship in defeating Joe Gurowka of Mississauga, Ont., 8-7 in an extra end.

Sullivan held a 3-1 record with the victory followed by Howard Brazeau of Fort Smith, N.W.T., who was 2-1.

The field was tighter after that with four teams sharing fourth spot with 2-2 records. They were Jack MacDuff of St. John's, Nfld., Northern Ontario's Rick Lang of Thunder Bay, Alf Romain of Halifax and Bernie Sarkes of Burnaby, B.C.

In the third round, split between morning and afternoon draws in which all 12 teams saw action, B.C. defeated Saskatchewan 8-3 in 11 ends, the Territorises used an extra end to defeat Quebec 5-4, Alberta needed an extra end to dispose of Manitoba 6-5, Nova Scotia edged Northern Ontario 6-5, New Brunswick defeated Newfoundland 8-5 and Ontario nipped P.E.I. 6-5.

In the fourth round at night, with a bye going to Alberta, B.C. defeated Quebec 4-3, Manitoba beat P.E.I. 5-3, Nova Scotia handled Saskatchewan 9-7, New Brunswick beat Ontario 8-7 and Northern Ontario defeated Newfoundland 11-7.

The match between Sarkes and Ursel produced a record-tieing seven blank ends and set a record for the fewest points scored in regulation ends.

An Alberta-Quebec championship game in 1974 in London set the record for blank ends while the previous lowest-scoring game was a 4-3 match in Fredericton last year won by Saskatchewan over Quebec.

Sparkes, who had trouble Sunday with "opening-day jitters and a couple of bad rocks" that didn't react consistently the same way, came back strongly Monday to defeat Ursel. He said the turning point came in the fifth end when he made a double takeout to score two and go ahead 2-1.

There were two pressure shots that stood out as possibly the day's best, one involving Bob Charlebois who throws skip rocks for Ontario, and the other by Sullivan of New Brunswick.

Charlebois made his shot in the 12th end of a game against P.E.I. to allow Ontario to count three and force an extra end. His come-around takeout had to be executed correctly to remove the shot P.E.I. stone without disturbing three Ontario counters.

Sullivan's shot also got his team out of serious trouble in the 12th end of a game against Ontario. He dismissed a possible draw with last rock to go for an in-line double takeout and while he rolled out himself it forced an extra end and he won.

Basketball: Hopefully Like Old Times Again

That had to be an impressive performance by the Victoria Scorpions in the provincial men's basketball championship at the old UVic gymnasium on the weekend.

Not only did the Scorpions come on strongly in the second half of each game against the Vancouver Athletics, but the fact that some of the players were obviously off color in the opening game Saturday made the contribution of the other members of the club that much more noteworthy.

For instance, coach Walt Burrows and his assistant Rick Mark substituted liberally in the Saturday game because it was felt that the flu, which had flattened three players — Bob Burrows, Brian MacKenzie and Dave Morgan — earlier in the week, might take its toll, especially if the going happened to get heavy and the score close. And the Scorpion "bench" rose to the occasion admirably. Everyone hit the scoresheet and if the Scorpions have been looking for an outside shooter to go with Burrows inside, they've got it. Gord Hoshal was impressive indeed when he was within his range and it seemed he could be set up more often.

But now things won't get any easier. With Raymond Union Jacks here for a playoff test this weekend, the Scorpions will get a measure of what to expect in the Canadian.

Besides, now the national tournament takes on added significance because of the presence of a city team. It's been a long time for Victoria, once considered the capital of the game. But that was 'way back when, and for those who weren't there and others who may have forgotten, it was in 1933 that the national title first came to the city.

That was the year of the Blue Ribbons; and the same club repeated again in 1935. Some of the notables of the time were the Chapmans, Art and Chuck; the Patricks, Lynn and Muzz; Tommy Little, Alex McKeachie, Claude Sluggett, Doug Peden, George Andrews, Alf McKeown, Joe Ross, Johnny Craig, Bill Wallis, Red Martin.

And it was in that 1935 season that the Ribbons defeated Assumption College right here for the national title.

But before that series, hey, did they have some rhubarbs? Nobody took defeat lightly in that era. For instance when the UBC Thunderbirds had been dispatched after a torrid five-game series in the provincial final, did they say "Nicely done, Ribbons"?

No way. They promptly filed an 11-count indictment against the Ribbons, the Victoria fans and one of the referees. They charged among other sundry items that the floor wasn't regulation because the overflow crowd overflowed on its boundaries, substitutions could not be properly made because of the crowd and the noise, and that their players were intimidated by a bombardment of foreign matter from the fans. Officials tossed out the protest and the Ribbons' final game victory, a 37-36 squeaker, was allowed to stand. But not without a warning. If it happened again in Victoria, the game would be defaulted.

★ ★ ★

After that Victoria fans became more sophisticated and three other national titles followed. The Dominoes, followers of the Blue Ribbons, won the Canadian championship in 1939; Pat Bay Gremlins took the honor in 1943 and the Dominoes returned after the war to win in 1946.

Since then, no Victoria team has made it to the Nationals although the Island was ably represented several times, including a national championship by the Alberni Athletics in 1955. Alberni, in its heyday, won seven provincial titles.

More recently, Vancouver Capilanos have been the power in the west. The Caps won last year's Dogwood playoff from the Scorpions, who had been favored because of their league championship, and finished third in the Canadian. The year previous, in 1974, the Capilanos were the Canadian champs.

So the Scorpions have gotten by some pretty good company this season, including a tremendous shooter in Derek Sankey of the Athletics on the weekend. But they did it in fine style, which wasn't the case last season, and the fact they were below par physically and still won handily is a credit to the coaching staff and the team bench for coming up big when the supreme effort was needed most.

It's been a long time since 1946. That was when the last dynasty ended, the Victoria team being named the basketball team of the half-century.

Big shoes to fill? Certainly. But the Scorpions appear ready to give it a try. A good one. Just as they did on the weekend. In addition, they can always call on outside help — three players, that is; and it's just a thought, but wouldn't Sankey be great from the outside?

Sankey To Join Scorpions

Derek Sankey, high-scoring forward of the Vancouver Athletics, has been asked to play for Victoria Scorpions in the Western and Canadian senior "A" men's basketball playoffs.

"We are attempting to contact him," sponsor Ian Scott Moncrief said this morning. "If he will play for us, then we'll pick him up."

Sankey scored 76 points in the three games against the Scorpions in the B.C. playoffs which concluded Sunday with Scorpions winning the best-of-three series, two games to one.

Sankey also is a former national team player.

Scorpions will play Raymond Union Jacks, the Alberta representative team in a best-of-three western final at the old UVic gym starting Friday night at 8:30 p.m. If the Union Jacks win the series, they will qualify for the Canadian championship in Victoria, March 26-27-28, making it a five-team tournament. If Raymond loses to Scorpions, it will be a four-team final. In any event, Scorpions are in the finals.

Sankey was named most valuable player in the Dogwood League this season and was presented with his award at Sunday's game here. He was also named to the first all-star team along with Bob Burrows of Scorpions, Terry MacKay of Capilanos, Brent Watson of the A's and Gary Smith of Burnaby Bullets. Brian MacKenzie of Scorpions was selected to the second team and Dave Morgan of Scorpions received honorable mention. League scoring champion was Watson.

Meanwhile, at Winnipeg on the weekend, St. Andrews Super Saints qualified for the Canadian final with a second straight win over Saskatoon Senior Huskies, 111-65, to win the prairie playoffs.

HOME LUMBER ADDS SHERRY FOR EXTRA PUNCH IN EAST

Sherry Stevenson, an 18-year-old forward with the University of Victoria Jayvees, has been added to the Victoria Home Lumber lineup and the trip to the Canadian senior "A" women's basketball final.

A graduate of Edmonton high school ranks, Sherry will join Gail Klaver and Sue Hoefer, both of Simon Fraser University, as additions to the British Columbia champions.

The Jack Lusk-coached team will leave Wednesday for Hamilton and the eight-team national tournament.

Home Lumber, bracketed in the "B" division along with Alberta, Manitoba and Newfoundland, will play Newfoundland in the opening round Thursday. The Victorians will play two games on Friday.

Quebec, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and Ontario make up the "A" division.

The top two teams after the round-robin preliminaries will advance to the semi-finals.

Other Victoria players travelling to Hamilton are Mary Coutts, Diana Morris, Angie Dobie, Lorraine Tutte, Dierdre Freethy, Karen Bigelow, Wendy Grant and Marilyn Benn.

LBC Seniors, Oak Bay Take Playoff Openers

League-champion London Boxing Club Seniors and Oak Bay followed different courses but both managed to come out on top of opening games in best-of-three Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League semi-final series Monday night at Royal Oak Junior High School.

Seniors outgunned London Boxing Club Juniors 47-26 in the second half en route to a 77-53 decision while Oak Bay was forced to rally and overcome a 36-27 half time deficit in order to top James Bay Athletic Association, 67-63.

Jim Mackay led Seniors with 15 points while Duff McCaghey and Dave Wirtanen added 14 points each.

Alf Hass also hit double figures with 11.

Thad Newman, Doug Calbeck and Ted Anderson each fired 11 points for Juniors.

Oak Bay and James Bay exchanged the lead several times late in the game before Oak Bay hit for the final three baskets and John Lauvaas scored the final two points from the free-throw line.

Tom Hatcher led Oak Bay with 23 points and Lauvaas added 18 while Mike Gains set the pace for James Bay with 16 points.

Seniors and Juniors play the second game of their series Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Cedar Hill Junior HIgh School. The series between Oak Bay and James Bay continues at 9 p.m. Thursday in Spectrum Community School.

Third games, if necessary, will be played next Monday.

OAK BAY (67): John Lauvaas 18, Tom Hatcher 23, Corky Jossul 15, Al Huddleston, Rick Humber 3, Del Christensen, Dan Wade, Mike Taaffe, 8, Don Horwood.

JAMES BAY (63): Harry Hunter 15, Mike Gains 16, Tony Anderson 14, John Campbell 4, Mike Morrill, Al Marlyn 6, Dave Anderson 8.

LBC SENIORS (77): Jim MacKay 15, Duff McCaghey 14, Dave Wirtanen 14, Loris Corletto 2, Mark Laverty 6, Bill Hingley 5, Rick Connolly 8, Mike Riemer 2, Danny Ireland, Alf Hass 11.

LBC JUNIORS (53): Kevin Worth 8, Steve Pescod 4, George Lomas 4, Thad Newman 11, John McManaman 4, Steve Rothwell, Doug Calbeck 11, Ted Anderson 11.

'Best-of-Seven' Has New Meaning

Western Homes Buckaroos and London Boxing Club have added an extra dimension to what was scheduled to be a best-of-seven Big Six Hockey League playoff final.

The teams played to a 4-4 deadlock — the third tie of the series — Monday night at Memorial Arena.

Boxers lead the series 3-0 and the seventh game is scheduled for 8:25 p.m., Thursday at Pearkes Arena but the series won't end until one of the teams has collected four victories. Conceivably, there could be several games yet, or until the Boxers win another.

Dave Williams scored twice, including the tying goal, to set the pace for Boxers while single markers were added by Bob Martin and Ron Poole.

Bill Pettinger, Rick Piechotta, Neil Palone and Randy Krantz scored for Buckaroos, who trailed 2-1 after two periods of play.

Steve Kishkan made 30 saves in the Buckaroo net while Reg Wonnenberg of Boxers blocked 27 shots.

Bernie Nears Point Record

Centre Bernie Federko of Saskatoon Blades continues to close in on the Western Canada Hockey League scoring record.

Federko picked up 10 points in four games last week to increase his overall total to 163. He has 64 goals and a league-leading 99 assists.

He has eight games left in which to get six points and break the record of 168 points set by Bobby Clarke in 1967-68. Clarke, however, set his record in a 60-game schedule. Each team plays 72 games this season.

Federko has an 18-point margin over another centre, Greg Carroll of Medicine Hat Tigers. Carroll had a 30-game streak broken this week. But still managed to pick up seven points in two other games.

Victoria's top point-getter is centre Jim Gustafson. He managed only one point in Cougars' 4-0 victory over Kamloops Sunday and holds down eighth place with 119 points.

Cougars play their next game Wednesday, meeting the Regina Pats at Memorial Arena.

Scout Fund Drive Falters

NEW YORK (CP) — The National Hockey League so far has kept its cash register locked to the financially-troubled Kansas City Scouts, a second-year expansion team that needs $400,000 to finish the season.

NHL president Clarence Campbell told a news conference Monday that "we have a policy of no gifts, no loans and no co-signers." but he indicated that position might change if president Ed Thompson of the Scouts has acceptable collateral or guarantees that the league will get its money back.

Campbell said the Scouts asked the NHL for a loan to complete its schedule. The NHL's board of governors winds up its two-day meeting here today with a decision on Kansas City high on the agenda. The board could not resolve it Monday.

"These are difficult meetings," Campbell said wearily. "We have no finite decisions on about almost everything."

The governors and the finance committee reviewed Kansas City's worsening financial condition all day Monday.

"What's required is in the range of $400,000, and these are only estimates in which they (the Scouts) are prepared to put up a portion themselves . . . They would put up 25 per cent," Campbell said.

The league "may very well" grant the Scouts financial help but under a different set of conditions than unsecured loans, Campbell conceded.

"There may be some circumstances that would warrant doing so. They could come up with some collateral or guarantee. We're evaluating an offer of collateral."

Thompson has placed his losses this year alone at $1 million. As a last-place team in the Smythe Division with 14 games remaining this season, the Scouts have won only 12 games and barely have been able to half fill their 16,500-seat arena.
